ESCAPE TRY COOLED

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A red-hot escape bid by a B.C. Penitentiary inmate early Monday was cooled when the driver of a refrigerated meat truck noticed he was carrying more than sides of beef.

Penitentiary director Dragon Cernetic said Ralph Cochrane, 48, hopped into the back of a meat truck while the driver was delivering meat to the prison kitchen.

When the driver opened the truck's back door at his next delivery in nearby Coquitlam he noticed two feet.

Slamming the door shut immediately, he called Coquitlam RCMP and Cochrane was arrested and returned to the prison.

Cochrane was attending the prison school program and was in the fourth year of a life sentence for armed robbery.

Cyprus Pact Reached, Turk Forces Remain

Times News Services

GENEVA — A new three-power accord was concluded today, giving Turkey a right to retain military forces on Cyprus, delegates reported.

The agreement, outlined by Turkish, British and Greek delegates, called upon Turkey to cut but not totally withdraw its invasion force from Cyprus sometime in the future.

No date was specified, however.

The delegates said the accord also gave Turkey's estimated 20,000-strong contingent the right to intervene if Turkish-Cypriots feel threatened by their more numerous Greek-Cypriot fellow-islanders; the right to continue occupying all new territory seized since the UN truce eight days ago and called for recognition of two self-ruling communities on the island, giving Cyprus the look of a federal state.

A spokesman for the Turkish delegation predicted the accord would be signed this afternoon.

As soon as an interim military agreement is concluded in Geneva, the Cyprus peace talks will be able to advance to a second stage to deal with the island republic's political future. This would include an overhauling of the Cyprus constitution as well as the 1960 agreement whereby Greece, Turkey and Britian guaranteed Cyprus independence.

These talks might begin toward the end of the first week in August, the Turkish spokesman said. One date being mentioned is Aug. 8.

Observers in Geneva reacted to the latest pronouncements with caution, recalling that several times during the six days of talks delegates had said an agreement was near. But each time the accord fell through.

The talks again appeared headed toward failure when Turkey, which had been taking a hard line, offered new proposals at the three-power conference.

U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger intervened today in the talks at the request of British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan in an effort to break a deadlock holding up final agreement between Greece and Turkey, conference officials said.

On Cyprus, Turkish invasion forces kept UN convoys off the roads today and a regiment of Turkish troops, backed by armor and artillery, marched eastward to strike positions from which they could seize control of the Greek Cypriot-held road to Nicosia, UN sources said.

British Maj. Peter Gill, commander of UN forces in Kyrenia, said the Turkish administration had halted UN patrols and ordered his forces to quit the area.

Turkish tanks, jeeps equipped with recoil-less rifles and artillery units moved up in support. There was no Greek Cypriot resistance to the Turkish advance and there were no sounds of gunfire.

Meanwhile, ousted Cyprus president Makarios flew from New York to London today, and aides said he has booked hotel rooms for two days to await the outcome of the Geneva talks. They said he expects to confer with Callaghan after the foreign secretary returns from the conference.

ROCKETS FIRED IN BEIRUT

BEIRUT — Palestinian guerrillas using mortars and rockets battled Lebanese rightwingers in a Beirut suburb today in the worst fighting in the capital since the Lebanese army clashed with the guerrillas in May 1973.

In Jerusalem, Defence Minister Shimon Peres, in remarks prepared for delivery in the knesset (parliament), said the Soviet Union is supplying Arab "terrorist organizations" with weapons.

The trouble in Lebanon stemmed from a shooting incident Saturday in which a Palestinian guerrilla from the Tel-Ez-Zaatar camp shot and wounded Ibrahim Gideon, leader of the right-wing phalangist militia in the Beirut suburb of Dikwaneh. Other militia members shot and killed the Palestinian.

Barge Dumps $3.6M in Pipe

AMCHITKA ISLAND, Alaska (AP) — The 8,300 tons of steel pipe destined for the trans-Alaska pipeline project in tow by a B.C. tug and lost in stormy seas Sunday is estimated to have been worth $3.65 million.

A spokesman for BP Alaska Oil Co., the field operators for the consortium of companies developing Prudhoe Bay, also said it is uncertain what the company will do to replace the pipe.

The pipe was dumped from a barge 22 miles east of Amchitka Island Sunday in stormy seas. The barge was en route from Japan to the north slope when it was lost. The 34- and 38-inch pipe was to be used to connect gathering stations at Prudhoe Bay with the pipeline.

The tug Sudbury II, which was towing the barge, jettisoned the pipe in an effort to save the barge, officials said. No injuries were reported

Nixon Loses Again

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Charging that he had wilfuly impeded its inquiry, the house judiciary committee voted today to recommend President Nixon be impeached and removed from office for disobeying its subpeonas for Watergate tapes.

The third article of impeachment was approved by a roll call vote of 21 to 17 in which 19 Democrats were joined by two Republicans.

Approval came after Article I was adopted Saturday night by 27-11, charging Nixon with obstructing justice in the Watergate cover-up.

On Monday, they charged Nixon with befouling democracy through wiretaps, breakins and tax harassment.

By a vote of 28 to 10 — with one more Republican joining the majority — the committee accused Nixon of repeatedly violating his oath, his duty and the rights of ordinary citizens in areas other than Watergate.

Today's vote accused Nixon of showing contempt for Congress by refusing to give up 147 tapes subpoenaed by the committee. Opponents say no president should be obliged to furnish evidence to be used against him.

McClory's vote brought to seven the number of Republicans who have voted for impeachment, with 10 consistently opposed. All 21 Democrats united a second time.

Also likely to come to a vote today was a proposed article on Nixon's $432,000 underpayment of taxes and use of government money to improve his homes.

Its sponsor, Rep. Edward Mezvinski (D — Iowa), said he believed he had 17 Democratic votes and might get the four Republican votes necessary for a winning majority of 21.

Deputy White House press secretary Gerald Warren gave the same response to Monday's committee vote as

City Urged to Study Rental House Program

Victoria housing committee members today urged city council to take advantage of federal and provincial funding to set up a low-income rental housing program under a non-profit housing corporation or some similar organization.

Committee chairman Ald. Percy Frampton said Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson had indicated that 100 per cent funding would be available to the city for such a project, for both capital and operating costs.

He said Nicolson's suggestion had followed a letter he (Frampton) had written, voicing concern over the effect of the provincial government's office expansion plans on the city's housing supply.

Frampton told the minister the department of public works not only snaps up all available office space in the city, even before new construction has started, but also converts existing residential buildings, thereby displacing tenants.

Nicolson's reply expressed interest in the alderman's suggestion that the housing department acquire various properties in the city for conversion to low-income rental suites.

Such accommodation, Nicolson said, would be especially useful for senior citizens, and he invited specific proposals for purchases.

His letter added: "Alternatively, the city of Victoria may wish to establish a non-profit housing corporation to engage in such an enterprise. One hundred per cent funding would be available from the federal and provincial governments."

Housing committee members today were solidly in favor of following up Nicolson's suggestion.

Said Ald. Alf Hood: "I think we must pursue some of these programs. The housing situation is not easing; it's becoming more acute if anything."

In forwarding the matter for discussion by council's committee of the whole, the committee asked planning director Geoff Greenhalgh to report on the management structure that would be required to operate a major housing program, and the initial funding required before senior government money becomes fully available.

CUT KILLS BERRY PICKER

NANAIMO — A 71-year-old woman bled to death after she cut her leg Saturday while picking blackberries behind her home in Cedar, near Nanaimo.

Nanaimo RCMP said Grace Amy Lavigne was found in a pool of blood at the back porch of her home. They believe she collapsed while trying to reach a phone to call help.

Coroner C. F. Newcombe has ordered an inquiry.

Fire Guard Contains Hope Blaze

HOPE (CP) — Firefighters were working today to finish bulldozing a fire guard around a 500-acre blaze in a thickly-wooded area of the Coquihalla Valley, about 20 miles northeast of here.

Barring high winds, the completed earth strip should contain the forest fire which has raged out of control since Saturday said Bill Smith, district fire protection officer.

"Things are looking in pretty good shape and if we don't get any really bad winds we should be able to tie it up today," said Smith.

Fanned by high winds and 100-degree temperatures, the blaze started to spread Saturday after having burnt for four days as a one-acre spot fire.

Gold Resumes Upward Climb

Chileans On Trial

SANTIAGO, Chile (WP) — The largest single trial of civilians by a military court since the overthrow of President Salvador Allende last year began Monday in the provincial Chilean city of Linares, according to reports reaching legal circles here.

All 74 defendants are civilians being tried for political offences and all were reported to be members of Allende's Socialist party, outlawed since the military coup in which the Marxist president died. The military prosecutor has asked that four of them be sentenced to death for trafficking with the enemy — defined as the Allende government.

Deposits Earn 10.5% in Banks

Victoria banks have pushed their top deposit rate to a record 10.5 per cent interest in an effort to attract funds in a tight money market.

The rate for short term deposits of between one and three months is up from 10.25 per cent.

Under the Winnipeg Agreement all banks offer identical deposit rates for terms of up to one year but some banks insist on minimum deposits of $5,000 while others are as low as $1,000 for the 10.5 per cent rate.

Banks insisting on a $5,000 minimum deposit point to the large amount of paper work and the small amount of profit in funds available for a maximum of 89 days.

Among those offering 10.5 per cent with only a $1,000 deposit is the Bank of Montreal.

Oak Bay branch manager L. G. Baird said about 70 per cent of his customers were old age pensioners and other living on fixed incomes.

"They are very conscious of interest rates and shop around for the best deal."

The bank has placed a sign in its window advertising the new rate.

Baird said the rise in rates has created a great interest in deposit income in the Oak Bay area.

"The volume of deposits is up 50 per cent after being about level for many years."

Many of the pensioners are converting funds from long term deposits where interest rates are lower to the high short-term deposits," Baird said.

"This creates a lot of paper work for us but we have to attract funds while the tight money situation lasts."

Roger Hemeon, manager of the main branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, said his company insists on a $5,000 minimum deposit to get the 10.5 per cent rate.

He said the Bank of Canada gave banks the option to vary the minimum deposit amount

Interior IWA Ratifies Pact

KELOWNA (CP) — Work could resume today at some forest operations throughout British Columbia's southern interior after members of the International Woodworkers of America overwhelmingly ratified a contract offer.

Wyman Trineer, chief negotiator for the 8,000 IWA southern interior members, said Monday night that pickets would be lifted and "the strike is over." He said some mills could resume operations today.

Trineer said he would not release figures or percentages on the vote, but said membership acceptance was "by a good healthy majority."

Voting in the southern interior locals — Kelowna, Kamloops and Cranbrook — was held during the weekend. Workers went on strike Wednesday.

The one-year pact, retroactive to June 30, was worked out Thursday by negotiators for the union and the Interior Forest Labor Relations Association.

Agreement resulted from resolving two contentious issues sawmill job category wage revisions and non-union contractors working for forest companies.

Major contract items included a 12-per-cent across-the-board, minimum 65-cents-an-hour increase, cost-of-living allowance with first payment Jan. 15, 1975, and a dental plan.

Also included is a new vacation schedule allowing from two weeks paid holiday for union members with one to three years seniority to six weeks for those with more than 27 years seniority.

A new overtime clause gives workers double time for all hours worked more than 12 in a day and for Sunday.

ALDRIN NOT USED ON B.C. CROPS

The B.C. agriculture department doesn't permit use of the pesticides aldrin and dieldrin on food crops or for the control of forest pests, government entomologist Jack Arrand said today.

But, he said on rare occasions, commercial growers have been permitted to use the chemical pesticides to control the narcissus fly — a pest of narcissus bulbs.

Arrand was commenting on a report from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency that there is overwhelming evidence the pesticides cause cancer, especially in young children.

The report stated that only political considerations are preventing EPA from exercising its authority to call for an immediate halt.

Arrand said while aldrin and dieldrin have never been banned in B.C., a government permit must be obtained before they can be used.

"We have never permitted the use of the pesticides on food crops and only rarely to control the narcissus bulb pest," he said.

Arrand said growers have exerted pressure on the government to relax the controls.

"Some think we are being too strict," he said. "They complain while they are not allowed to use the chemicals, growers in Washington can use it to control a strawberry pest. This apparently puts them at a disadvantage.

"But the department has always held that the use of the chemicals should be strictly controlled," he added.

Mexico Tortures Canadian—Paper

CALGARY (CP) — The son of a Calgary couple is being held by Mexican authorities on a drug charge and has been tortured and brutalized while the parents attempt to raise $30,000 to free their son, according to a story in The Albertan.

The newspaper says the couple, not identified because they said they feared reprisals against their son, is near-bankruptcy due to alleged extortion by Mexican officials.

Maurice Schwartzmann, Canadian Ambassador to Mexico, is quoted as saying Canada is doing all it can to obtain the son's freedom but cannot interfere with the internal affairs of another country.

The morning daily quotes the ambassador as saying a hunger strike by American and Canadian prisoners at the jail where the Calgary boy is kept ended last week, and no one became ill as a result of the strike.

The paper says the son claimed guards at the jail beat and tortured prisoners and said a group of prisoners were selling "protection."

The paper said the boy claimed the torture involved electric cattle prods "used on the most sensitive parts of the body," forced wakefulness, 16 to 18 hours of labor such as scrubbing cell walls, and constant beatings.

The father is quoted as saying he met with a Mexican lawyer, and a representative of the Mexican attorney-general's department Jan. 4 and that at the meeting he was told his son would be released from prison if the father paid a fee for this "consideration."

"The original starting price was $100,000 but there was no way he could supply that type of money so $30,000 was decided upon," the paper says.

The embasssy has relayed the couple's complaints concerning prison conditions to Mexican authorities and embassy officials have visited Canadians in the prison every day, but the ambassador said Canada can do nothing for them.

Pollen Wants Accounts Of 'Have-Not' Areas

EDMONTON (CP) — The three provinces that contribute considerable sums of money to the "have-not" provinces in the form of equalization payments have the right to know how that money is being spent, Mayor Peter Pollen of Victoria told a conference of mayors Monday.

"It's damn well necessary that these provinces be given an accounting of where the money is going," Mayor Pollen told the other 10 mayors from large cities at the Cities Common Interest Conference.

"I'm not bothered that someone is getting the dough. But there is no accountability of where it's going."

Ontario, Alberta and B.C. — the so-called "have" provinces — provide much of the money that goes to other provinces.

Pollen said that as governments get bigger and bureaucracy expands, controls over spending are weakened. "All levels of government are getting bigger and bigger. It's like a group of elephants with a glandular condition."

Pollen's remarks prompted a resolution calling for municipal, provincial and federal governments to initiate "revenue forecasting and disciplined budgetary control mechanisms . . . in order to afford them a means of establishing a discipline revenue and expenditure process on a current to five-year basis."

The resolution said "there is a need for co-ordinated financial forecasting and disciplined budgeting at all three levels of government in Canada."

The conference was attended by 11 mayors. Twenty-four were invited.

Tiny Strait Isle in Turmoil

COLVILLE ISLAND, Wash. (AP) — From the water, this tiny island in the Strait of Juan de Fuca looks like a pleasant retreat from the pressures of civilization.

But a population boom here has caused a breakdown of communication and set the social order asunder. There has been a large increase in rape; parents refuse to look after their young; and bands of juveniles wander about killing the unborn.

The problem is that there just isn't enough room for the 3,000 seagull residents of the 9½-acre island.

John Stout, a biology professor from Andrews University in Michigan, is the man who has discovered all this about the Colville Island seagulls. He has spent 10 years and $240,000 in federal money studying these birds and, in the process, has learned something about the way they communicate with each other.

Stout and his research team, based at the Walla Walla College marine biological station near Deception Pass, have been studying the aggressive communication of seagulls defending their territory.

Thus far, they have discovered that a gull's language consists mainly of a series of body displays. Stout has isolated five basic displays by which a seagull warns an intruder to get off and stay off his property. Basically, he's found that the higher a seagull holds his head, the less aggressive he is feeling.

"Fighting is very hard on the species," said Humphrey Gillett, another Andrew University biologist working with Stout. "They use these different displays to try to prevent it."

But seagulls return to their birthplace to nest and when they return to Colville Island they find only a few choice rocky nesting places to stake out their territory.

Humans need permits from the federal government to set foot on the island.

Gillett said that when people walk across the island, they disturb the chicks and cause them to wander into another gull's territory where they are promptly eaten. And he said the Colville Island gulls have enough problems of their own without this.

Impeachment Step Closer

the White House had made to the first article of impeachment, voted Saturday: "We're confident the facts do not support the article and we're confident the house will assess the facts and not vote out impeachment."

Monday's seven-hour debate was emotionless, with Republicans challenging the quality of the evidence rather than defending Nixon against every accusation of wrongful behavior.

Warren said flatly Monday that Nixon will not resign if impeached by the House of Representatives.

Warren said the White House is doing no "traditional" lobbying in the House on impeachment; has taken no formal head count, though "there may be some people who are mentally counting"; and has no meeting scheduled on the issue with the House Republican leadership.

He also said the president has no plans to go on national television to defend himself anew, as House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes (R—Ariz.) said Sunday he must as the "only viable" way remaining to avert impeachment.

Warren said the president did not watch the proceedings on television, but staffers told him about the vote.

Nixon today was to turn over to U.S. District Judge John Sirica the first batch of the taped Watergate conversations the supreme court ruled he must surrender for the Watergate cover-up trial in September.

The president Monday listened to some of the tapes, which record conservations with former top aides, including H. R. Halderman.

Meanwhile, the United States Senate has taken its first step toward a possible impeachment trial of Nixon by asking the rules committee to review procedure and precedents and recommend necesary revisions.

Chairman Howard Cannon (Dem.—Nev.) said the committee will begin work in close session Wednesday.

"We will examine very carefully the rules follwed in the Johnson case," he said, referring to the impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson more than a 100 years ago.

Johnson was the only president brought to trial in the Senate. The vote in his case was one short of the two-thirds majority required for conviction and removal from office.

Cannon said in an interview that he already has been studying the rules and the precedents and does not think many changes will be necessary if Nixon is brought to trial.

On Friday, John Dean, the former White House counsel who became Nixon's chief accuser and a key figure in the impeachment inquiry, will be sentenced for his part in the Watergate cover-up.

A spokesman for the U.S. district court announced today that Judge Sirica would impose sentence on the 34-year-old Dean, who pleaded guilty Oct. 19 to a single count of conspiracy to abstruct justice.

He could receive as much as five years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

900 Loggers Won't Work

PORT ALBERNI — Nine hundred loggers at the Cameron and Franklin River divisions of McMillan Bloedel refused to go to work today in a dispute triggered by a training program for fallers last week.

Crummies carrying loggers to their jobs were turned around by fallers, a company spokesman said.

The dispute over fallers' training began last week when jobs were posted for trainee fallers.

But some applicants had more seniority than fallers themselves and fallers from outside the logging divisions, in some cases, had less seniority. When the fallers were asked to train the new fallers, they refused.

ESSO Cuts Cost Of Heating Oil

Imperial Oil Ltd. will cut its price for heating oil by 1.5 cents a gallon following a similar move by Gulf and Shell, a company spokesman said.

All three companies said they were ending their free furnace maintenance service and would begin charging for repairs.

In a letter to its customers, Imperial said repairs and maintenance costs should be "borne by customers who use them, not shared by all equally."

NIXON EFFORTS ERODED

WASHINGTON (WP) — New signs of erosion in President Nixon's efforts to forestall impeachment have appeared among the conservatives who up to now have constituted the bedrock of his support.

Howard Phillips, the president's former director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, Monday announced the formation of a new group known as Conservatives for the Removal of the President, which has its aim the building of impeachment support among Conservative constituencies.

The announcement by Phillips that he will form Conservatives for the Removal of the President — which he calls "Creep" because it has the same initials as the Committee to Re-Elect the President — is seen as likely to generate more support in favor of impeachment.

"Nixon will fall when conservative constituencies make it possible for conservative legislators to vote for his impeachment," Phillips said.

A mailing sent out by Phillips Sunday contends that Nixon was pursuing a "survival strategy" in which all principled decisions on issues had been sacrificed.

"The president responds to the pressures of the moment, often without respect to source or merit," the letter said. "Thus on land use, conservative pressures were greatest and Nixon yielded to them. On legal services, he caved in to threats from the left."

Phillips said he would prefer that Nixon would resign and believes that he might still do so. But if he doesn't, Phillips continued, he should be impeached.

". . . I join those conservatives who believe that Nixon should be held to the same standards of conduct for which we have argued in the past and to which we wish to hold others in the future," the letter said.

'Moderate' Restraint Best Curb

By JAMES L. ROWE, Jr.

WASHINGTON (WP) — Presidential counsellor Kenneth Rush said Monday that the Nixon administration believes a continued program of "moderate" restraint is the best way to fight rising prices "without experiencing an excessive increase in unemployment."

Rush, testifying before the Joint Congressional Economic Committee, said the combination of budget austerity and high interest rates will be pursued "until the desired results are obtained."

To a charge by Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis.) that the administration's policy represents "no policy," Rush replied that no new approaches should be tried.

Rush predicted that the policies the administration has adopted will cause unemployment to rise from the current 5.2 per cent to somewhere between 5.5 per cent and 6 per cent by the end of the year. Prices will be rising at a pace near 7 per cent, he told the committee. Neither projection is different from those the administration has hewn to for the past several months.

The economy will begin to grow again in the second half of 1974, Rush said, making "small" but steady gains in real output," although probably "not as robust as anticipated at the beginning of the year."

Da Nang Fighting Continues

The command said 113 North Vietnamese were killed in clashes around besieged Dai Loc and Duc Duc, beseiged district towns within 20 miles of Da Nang. Five government troops were killed and 32 were wounded, the command said.

But other military sources said 500 or more government troops were believed to be missing after the North Vietnamese Monday overran seven outposts around Thuong Duc, a third beseiged district town 20 miles southwest of Da Nang.

The North Vietnamese also pounded Thuong Duc with more than 1,000 rocket, artillery and mortar shells.

The sources said the seven outposts were manned by about 700 troops, and only 150 to 200 made it to Thuong Duc.

MILK PRICE TO INCREASE

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — An increase in the base price of industrial milk will be announced Thursday, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said today.

Whelan told a regional meeting of the National Farmer's Union (NFU) the increase will be less than that of $3 a hundredweight demanded by the NFU.

Industrial milk is used in the manufacture of skim milk and other dairy products.

Farmers in Ontario now receive $8.50 a hundredweight for industrial milk and $10.45 for first-grade fluid milk.

Spokesman for the farmer's union complain that the prices are lower than production costs and are driving farmers out of business.

The basic price for industrial milk is fairly stable across the country, with some regional variations depending on the market prices for such products as cheese, skim milk powders and ice cream.

The fluid milk base price to farmers, set by provincial agencies, varies from $10.10 a hundredweight in Prince Edward Island to $10.59 a hundredweight in British Columbia. The British Columbia price, however, is actually higher because of special government supplements that bring the return to the farmer to about $13.

Whelan also indicated that the Thursday announcement may also deal with new beef policy.

The minister said a new policy is needed to stabilize the domestic beef industry. Several alternatives were being considered to provide subsidies for producers.

Whelan also said it is only a matter of time until the United States institutes a program of certification for its beef.

Ottawa has cut off beef imports from the U.S. until that country sets up a government program to certify its beef as free of the growth hormone laboratory experiments.

The minister said some importers, including Australia, have been able to meet the requirement.

"My guess is that pressures are building on the U.S. for their government to accept Canada's position," he said.

but said the interest rate would have to be identical.

Hemeon said the Bank of Canada apparently feared interest rates would get out of hand if private banks waged an all-out battle to attract short term funds during a period of great economic expansion.

Rates for deposits for more than a one-year term vary but most banks offer a rate of 9.25 per cent up to two years and 9 per cent from two years to six years.

Savings deposit accounts that can be withdrawn at any time have an interest rate of 9.25 per cent at all banks.

The prime interest rate for large borrowers has gone to 11.5 per cent and consumer loans are 13.4 per cent or 13.5 per cent.

The mortgage rate remains at 11.75 per cent.

among the crew. The barge was towed upside down to Amchitka, where a crew of American marine freighters arrived Monday to salvage it.

The tow came near grief earlier in the voyage. Not long after the pipe had been loaded in Japan, the Sudbury II had to cast loose its barges and set back to Japan for treatment of her skipper's leg, injured when caught in the towing cable. The Sudbury II later reclaimed the barges and proceeded toward Alaska with a substitute captain.

The tug, owned by Seaspan International Ltd. of Vancouver, had been scheduled to meet other tugs and barges of the Arctic Marine Freighters fleet south of Point Barrow and form up for the dash to the north slope oil fields as soon as the ice opened up.

The barge that overturned — the Ketchikan — is owned by Crowley Maritime of Seattle, and is valued at $2 million.

Thunderstorms rumbled in a few southern interior localities Monday evening and a repeat performance is likely again late today. For the most part however B.C. will continue to experience sunny weather today with afternoon highs expected to range from the sixties on the north coast to the nineties in the southern interior. There are signs that a cooling trend may develop over the south coast within the next couple of days due to an influx of fresh Pacific air.

Connally to Fight Charge

HOUSTON (UPI) — Former treasury secretary John B. Connally, indicted on charges of accepting $10,000 in bribes and lying to a grand jury about it, stood at the door of his spacious, vine-covered home and vowed to fight the charges "with every resource I have."

The Watergate grand jury, in a 90-second proceeding in open court, submitted the indictment to chief U.S. District Judge George Hart in Washington Monday.

Connally, 57, was charged with two counts of accepting bribes to influence a 1971 increase in milk price supports, one count of conspiracy to commit perjury and obstruct justice, and two counts of making false declarations before the grand jury.

The charges carry a maximum penalty of 19 years in prison and $50,000 in fines.

Connally served three terms as governor of Texas and was one of the most popular Democrats in the state.

After his party switch, he was considered one of the leading candidates for the 1976 GOP presidential nomination.

"I don't know that I ever had any chances for the nomination, but this sure hasn't helped them any," Connally said Monday. "But let's wait and see."

Connally said he had faith in "the American people to make the right decision once they have all the facts."

But at least one Republican wasn't as optimistic.

"This absolutely eliminates him from any consideration as a presidential candidate, even if he is exonerated," said Harris County Republican chairwoman Nancy Palm.

"Unfortunately an indictment in the public eye is tantamount to conviction."

A spokesman for Connally's law firm said he was outraged at the indictments.

"This is simply the most extreme instance of imaginable of the hatred and hysteria that now grips the legal processes in the district of Columbia," said the spokesman, Leroy Jeffers.

Medical Services Link Approved for Charlottes

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Telemedical services for residents of the Queen Charlotte Islands will be among more than 20 major experiments approved recently by the federal department of communications.

The experiments constitute the "socia-economic" portion of the Communications Technology Satellite (CTS) program which will have cost federal taxpayers more than $60 million by the time it is launched late in 1975.

Part of the aim of the CTS program will be to determine the degree to which satellite communications technology can revolutionize the lives of Canadians during the coming decade, particularly those in remote areas who, even with the Anik Communications satellite system do not yet have basic communications services.

Telemedicine will provide telephone and television links between residents of the Queen Charlottes and medical experts in Ottawa. Residents of Moose Factory, Ont., will be linked with London, Ont., hospital facilities.

Similar telemedicine experiments are planned for Quebec and Newfoundland.

The Queen Charlotte experiment was selected from some 50 applications and will cost the federal government about $2.3 million. Other funds will come from the provincial government, universities and private sources.

The CTS evaluation committee approved the plan submitted by Dr. Hugh MacGuire of the Queen Charlotte Islands General Hospital, who has publicly complained that the Anik system should be used to provide telemedicine free of charge to such remote communities.

The experiment will give the hospital its first two-way video connection with the mainland, though for technical reasons the hospital will be linked with Ottawa and not Vancouver.

Doctors at the University of Ottawa will be able to instruct and guide doctors, nurses and paramedical staff on the Queen Charlotte Islands in the intricacies of emergency diagnosis, treatment and operations.

Land Officer Named For Victoria Post

Warnock, a University of Alberta agriculture graduate who joined the service in 1970, replaced John Esler who was promoted to regional land inspector for Vancouver Island.

Inspectors examine and assess crown land applications for purchase or lease.

The appointment follows a recent reorganization of land management to seven regions covering Prince George, Prince Rupert, Cariboo, Kamloops, Nelson, Vancouver and Vancouver Island. They replace the three former regions of Prince George, Kamloops and the Coast.

HEATH PELTED BY FLOUR BOMB

LONDON (Reuter) — Opposition Leader Edward Heath was hit by a flour bomb today when he arrived at a reception to welcome the British rubgy team from a tour of South Africa.

Despite a strong cordon of police, a small group of anti-apartheid demonstrators gained entry to the hotel near London airport where the champagne party was held.

Indian Land Logging Plan Worth $4.7M

Logging of Indian lands on the West Coast of Vancouver Island is due to start early next month in a $4.7-million undertaking by Esperanza Inlet natives.

A spokesman for Ehattesaht Co-operative Enterprise Association said there has been reasonable assurance of interim financing from the B.C. Development Bank, which is processing an application for $200,000.

In addition, the association has applied for $2 million under the federal-provincial Special Agricultural and Rural Development Authority and for timber harvesting licences for both Indian reserve land and adjoining Crown lands near Zeballos.

In what is thought to be the largest Indian logging scheme of its kind, the co-operative has a logging timetable that would see 750,000 board feet of timber felled in August and one million board feet in September from Indian lands alone.

It is estimated the Indians have exportable timber valued at $760,000 which will bring between $300 and $400 per board foot and net the co-operative about $100,000 for the first 1.75 million board feet. About another 1.5 million board feet are on Crown lands.

Indians of seven or eight reserves comprise the co-operative which is intended to develop native skills through employing mostly Indian labor. They applied for a development permit from the minister of lands, forests and water resources through Alberni MLA Bob Skelly.

A 12-year development proposal must be forwarded including a commitment to develop timber lands in the approved fashion with regard for conservation and environmental protection. A decision is to be made on reforestation either by the Indians or the forest service.

Lands would be under supervision of the provincial forest service and appraised stumpage rates would be paid.

RELEASED from hospital, Spain's General Francisco Franco was greeted by crowds shouting his name. The 81-year-old leader was hospitalized for three weeks by a blood clot in his right thigh. On leaving the Madrid Clinic, he went first to El Pardo Palace, his home outside the city, and then on to northwest Spain for further recuperation.

Quake Rocks New Delhi

NEW DELHI (UPI) — A strong earthquake rocked areas of southwestern Asia today and sent panic-stricken residents running into the streets of this Indian capital.

Walls of large office buildings cracked in New Delhi but there were no reports of casualties.

Nor were there any immediate casualty reports from other parts of the Indian subcontinent or neighboring countries. But the area where the quake was centered was remote and sparsely populated.

There were varying reports on the location of the epicenter and the strength of the quake.

The Indian meteological department said it started at 10.45 a.m. (1:15 a.m. EDT) in the Hindukush mountains between Pakistan and Afghanistan and tremors lasted for 15 minutes. The department said the intensity of the earthquake measured between 6 and 6.5 on the Richter scale.

Radio Pakistan said an earthquake of moderate intensity rocked the northeast Pakinstan cities of Rawlpindi, Lanore, Lyallpur and Multan early today. The report made no mention of casualties or damage.

Premier Named

ROSEAU, Dominica (AP) — Deputy Premier Patrick Roland John has been sworn in as premier of Dominica after Friday's resignation of the Caribbean island's first premier, Edward LeBlanc. John succeeded LeBlanc two weeks ago as head of the Labor party, defeating former deputy premier Ronald Armour at a party convention.

Hydro Agreement Close In Office Worker Talks

Agreement appears close to end the threat of a strike by office workers against B.C. Hydro.

A brief statement by Labor Minister Bill King late Monday said the report of industrial inquiry commissioner Clive McKee has been received.

"The industrial inquiry commission reported that: 'After 11 days of intensive negotiations the parties have arrived at a potential settlement wh ich they will recommend to their principals,'" King said.

King, B.C. Hydro and Local 378 of the Office and Technical Employees Union declined to give details.

B.C. Hydro general manager J. Norman Olsen said "we seem to have a potential settlement. The negotiating teams still have some details to work out but we're hoping for an early agreement."

The union represents nearly 3,000 office workers at the crown corporation and had threatened to picket all company operations, which would have brought urban bus service in Victoria and Vancouver to a halt.

King appointed McKee as industrial inquiry commissioner and both sides agreed his recommendations would be submitted to their members.

Prior to McKee's appointment, B.C. Hydro offered a two-year contract which included wage increases of between 16 and 17.4 per cent retroactive to April 1 and an average 17 per cent cumulative increase in the second year, a reduction in the work week and increased health and welfare plan coverage.

Olsen had said the reduced work week, effective Jan. 1, 1975, would be achieved through providing 17 extra working days off a year which with statutory holidays mean that every second week would be a four-day week.

Irish Informers Get IRA Amnesty

BELFAST (Reuter) — "Tell us what you told the British agents — and you will not be harmed," the Irish Republican Army said today in an amnesty aimed at Irish informers in Northern Ireland.

Usually, informers, known locally as "touts," get rough treatment. The ultimate punishment is a bullet through the head. Others are crippled by shooting through the kneecaps, tarred and feathered, or deported, depending on how serious the Provisional IRA considers their activities.

But during the month of August, said a statement from the Provisionals' brigade staff, the IRA offers immunity to informers who voluntarily confess they have had contact with British Army intelligence and the police Special Branch.

Anyone who has been pressed into working for the army or police will go unharmed if they come forward and "make a clean breast of their activities" to the IRA, the statement said.

In recent months the Provisional IRA command structure has been disrupted by the capture of several brigade commanders and some battalion officers through anonymous tips to the security forces.

The amnesty does not apply to people who have already been convicted in their absence of informing and are being sought by the IRA for punishment.

Hostage Dealings At Impasse

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Negotiations with three armed convicts at the Texas state prison remained at an impasse today amid a report that the rebel convicts are willing to exchange some of their hostages for prison officials.

Kathy Pollard, 24, the daughter of one of the civilian hostages being held by the convicts, said that rebel convict leader Fred Gomez Carrasco agreed during a telephone conversation with her Monday night to trade 10 of his 13 hostages for five prison officials.

Miss Pollard, whose mother, Novella Pollard, is one of the 10 civilian hostages held by Carrasco and two other armed convicts, said Carrasco also has backed off from demands for more weapons. Carrasco also is holding three convicts hostage. A prison spokesman said Carrasco's offer, when made directly to them, will be considered. A similar deal offered earlier by Carrasco was turned down by corrections officials because it was conditional on the women hostages remaining with Carrasco.

Crash Victim Identified

RCMP in Sidney have released the name of a woman tourist killed Monday when the car she was driving ran into the back of a provincial government street sweeper on Pat Bay Highway half a mile south of McTavish Road.

She was Beatrice Eleanor Johnston, 63, of Redding, Calif.

Police said the street sweeper operated by Edward Lightburn was working at the time of the accident. They said dust from the machine may have impaired visibility.

An inquest has been ordered starting tonight at Sands Funeral Chapel in Sidney.

Wallace Seeks Pill Tests

Provincial Tory leader Scott Wallace said today the degree of hazard in Chinese herbal pills should be clarified by more than one laboratory test from more than one source.

Wallace said many people using the pills with benefit believe their removal from the market by the federal food and drug directorate has been arbitrary and not justified.

The pills, sold to relieve rheumatic and arthritic pain, were seized by federal inspectors across Canada two months ago and federal laboratory tests were reported later to show they contained five drugs available only by prescription.

Government and medical spokesmen have warned the drugs can produce an acute blood condition which may prove fatal.

Wallace said he is not necessarily accepting the accusations of the pills' proponents that the laboratory work was done by students and was inadequate, or that tests can be misleading because herbal fermentation can produce results similar to those if the drugs were present.

But he said it is clear that in the public interest the whole issue should be clarified with evidence on the pills substantiated by more than one laboratory test from more than one source.

He said he has written Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister in the health protection branch, asking for a full report of the data available on the pills.

There could be other drugs coming into Canada where the same problem has not yet been uncovered so he has also asked for assurances that batches of imported drugs are being effectively screened, he said.

"Since it seems certain that dangerous ingredients are present in certain batches of the Nan Lien pills, and as such would be dangerous to a percentage of people using them, the decision to withdraw these pills from the market pending a thorough investigation is a very sound policy," he said.

Wallace said there is a great volume of documented evidence to show some of the ingredients reported in the lab tests should only be taken under close medical supervision.

Tragedy in the Amphitheatre

The long months of Watergate and allied miseries have now culminated in the first official step toward a presidential impeachment. Mr. Nixon has been accused by the House judicial committee of abusing his powers of office and obstructing justice.

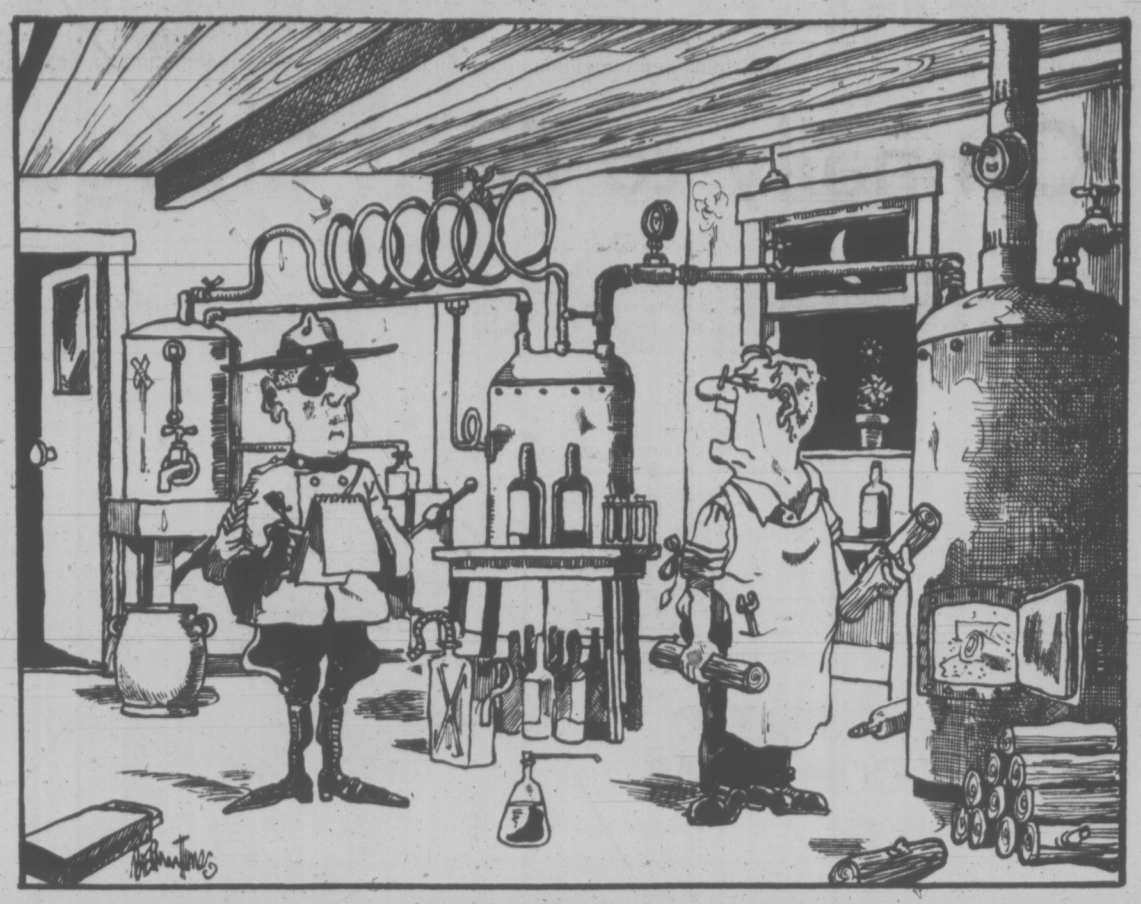
Whether or not the House of Representatives agrees with the committee's decision, and whether or not Mr. Nixon is provably guilty of the charges, the fact remains that the United States has now reached a moral watershed and the House and Senate actions soon to take place will have historical importance far in excess of the culpability or otherwise of one man. The choice of the nation, through its representatives, must now be a moral one, accepting a high moral standard or rejecting it.

Regardless of whether he could be found legally guilty in a court, Mr. Nixon through his long association with charges — and heavy evidence — of chicanery, double-dealing, evasion and contempt, has come to signify for millions of Americans a disrespect for law. If he remains as president, disrespect for law in high places will in effect have been condoned as acceptable for those millions; law and morality — already apparently in a shaky condition — will suffer a sorry blow. If he is driven from office, right will have triumphed, and for millions of citizens faith in the moral standard will have been confirmed.

To this extent, the whole situation has got far beyond the personal problem of the president as an individual and become extended into a classic confrontation of right and wrong, of good and evil.

Since the United States is the leader of the western world in power, production and international influence, the ramifications of the pending national decision in Washington will be felt far afield. We live in an era when the very essence of moral behavior is under scrutiny and attack. Any further weakening of the moral fibre of the western leadership must be felt abroad, must be reflected in a depression of standards elsewhere. Certainly the United States' prestige and standing in world councils would suffer; allegations of "typical" trickery and deceit would be made, silently or otherwise, when hard international bargaining was under way.

The tragedy for Mr. Nixon, and perhaps for his country, is that at this point his personal guilt or innocence has really become a side issue. It appears inevitable that he must go, or do great harm to his office and his nation. Even the undoubtedly brilliant international moves he has made cannot save him from this terrible dilemma. Guilty or not, Mr. Nixon has become the focus of a dramatic, historical tragedy such as the Greek dramatists perfected in their heyday. The world can only watch in wonder as the powers above put on their instruments.



". . . running a still? . . . are you crazy? I'm trying to make some anti-freeze . . ."

A Cosy Political Commission

In granting Canadian airline fare increases last week the Canadian Transport Commission lived up to its reputation as a rubber stamp for the transportation industry. That is not to say higher fares weren't justified; it's just that the public has no information on which to base its own decision.

For the first time in it's short history — it was created in 1968 by former Transport Minister Jack Pickersgill who promptly nominated himself as president at $40,000 per annum — the CTC held public hearings on air fare increases because the Consumers Association of Canada requested the innovation.

But it didn't take the Commission long to dismiss the CAC brief opposing increases as a ". . . frivolous application for postponement. . . " The CAC argued that detailed information on which to oppose the fare hikes was denied to it by the Commission which said such information was confidential.

What kind of a regulatory body is this? Is it there to protect the Canadian people or the transportation industry? The commission agreed to hold public hearings only when pressed and then denied information to another public body wishing to present an opposing case. Even more astonishing, the CTC wagged its collective finger at the CAC, suggesting that air carriers might push for even higher fares if faced with such persistent opposition. In other words, "Don't rock the boat; we could grant larger increases next time if you keep harassing us."

It appears that the CTC is a classic case of a regulatory agency becoming a captive of the industry which it is supposed to control. At least the public has no way of knowing otherwise. Public transportation and utility companies affect the whole populace. Because they often exercise a near monopoly in their economic sector, it is important that they should have to justify price increases.

The commission which controls and regulates Canadian transportation should establish itself beyond all suspicion of being a rubber stamp for the industry.

A Victory for Reason

Victoria city council's decision to shelve the anti-begging bylaw was correct. Besides the legal complications which made it impossible to enforce, it was also discriminatory in making a distinction between musician beggars and those asking for a simple hand-out. Under the proposed bylaw, a policeman would have to combine the education of a lawyer with a musical ear when trying to ascertain if someone was begging or actually providing public entertainment on city streets.

It was astonishing to read that the city fathers, after scrapping the proposed bylaw, admitted that they had now been informed that begging wasn't really a problem on city streets after all. Does that mean that the begging bylaw was conceived on an emotional whim following a few complaints? Perhaps there should be a more thorough investigation before aldermen start fabricating new laws.

While begging is no real problem on the streets of Victoria, it does occur, especially during the summer months when the city is full of transients. Council could easily direct the police department to point the way to agencies which aid destitute people. If this is done police, beggars, and the average citizen who is embarrassed, and sometimes insulted, will all be off the hook. That would seem to be a solution more in keeping with gentle Victoria.

WILLIAM R. FRYE

A Distinctly Favorable Turn

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The most far-reaching impact of the Cyprus crisis may prove to have been, not what has happened in Cyprus, but what has happened in Greece.

The end of an era of military rule in Athens is much more than a humanitarian blessing to the people of the world's oldest democracy, though that blessing should not be underrated.

It is also:

- The end of a seriously disruptive controversy in NATO. Many West Europeans wished to shake loose from the Greek colonels; Washington refused.
- The removal of a blemish on the free world, which communist and third-world spokesmen rarely hesitated to highlight. No longer need the West feel embarrassed when it champions human rights in Eastern Europe.

Heal Antagonisms

- An opportunity to begin healing generations of Greek-Turkish antagonisms. The crowds in Athens this past week were actually hailing Turkey. "At last the Turks did something for us," it was being said — a reference, of course, to the invasion of Cyprus which humiliated the Greek junta and precipitated its abdication.

The United States may or may not share in the beneficial fall-out. Washington's tolerance of the Greek colonels was widely interpreted as support. In point of fact, it was an effort to keep intact an alliance tie which had, and has, great military value.

Willingness to blink at repressive extremes for the sake of pragmatic advantage is, however, a policy which carries with it the possibility of backlash. It undercuts popular support for the American tie; and when people regain influence over government actions, their resentment may endanger that tie.

This kind of backlash has not been felt in Portugal, in part because Washington long pressed Lisbon to take a more enlightened stance. The United States would be in a more comfortable position today in Greece if it had done so there more consistently.

The same choice — between human rights and pragmatic advantage — is being faced in southern Africa, where the ultimate backlash could be very severe indeed. Blacks who yearn for an end to oppressive white supremacy are already frustrated and angry at the ambivalence of American and British policy.

MARSHAL TITO
. . . better protection

In a sense, there is a similar decision to be made in regard to Eastern Europe. The Soviet Union offers the West detente provided Soviet rule in the Kremlin's World War II empire remains unchallenged. And detente could bring some very tangible benefits to the West.

But to accept and help perpetuate Soviet repression of human rights in Eastern Europe, with no serious effort to nudge the Kremlin toward liberalization, would be to risk the future for the sake of the present. Like some Greeks, the East Europeans might well feel they had been betrayed.

So there will be many who will watch the progress of Greek-American relations for indications of just how much morality it is realistic and practical to expect in politics. If it can be shown that the United States had a hand in the colonels' decision to abdicate, the lesson will of course be blurred; but otherwise it ought to be highly instructive.

Meanwhile, in several subtle ways the balance of power has shifted in the West's favor.

The Soviet Union gained considerable propaganda mileage in the past seven years by excoriating the Greek regime and posing, by implication, as a champion of human rights. That opportunity will no longer be so readily available now.

Less Danger

Turmoil in Yugoslavia when Marshal Tito passes from the scene may be less of a danger to the West with a rational and dependable Greek government available as a base of possible counter-action. Should the Soviet Union seek to restore Kremlin authority over Yugoslavia, NATO sources have said the West would not sit idly by.

A democratic Greece, under a government which has popular support, will itself be a less-inviting target for subversion from Soviet-oriented Bulgaria or Chinese-oriented Albania. NATO's southern flank will be more solidly protected than it was under the rigid but brittle military regime.

Events of the past week have, therefore, taken a distinctly favorable turn for the West. A week ago, when Turkish troops began landing in Cyprus, it would have been wildly optimistic to forecast such an outcome.

JAMES RESTON

Able to Talk to One Another

WASHINGTON — One of the reassuring aspects of Greek-Turkish settlement of the Cyprus crisis has been the speed and unity of NATO diplomacy.

Only a few short months ago, officials were complaining that American leadership was crippled and that the European allies couldn't agree on anything, but in the past week they have demonstrated what can be done when consultation and trust are restored.

Within two hours, Secretary of State Kissinger and the other nine foreign ministers were able to talk to one another and agree on the wording of a sharp demarche to the Greek and Turkish governments. The result has been a transformation of the military and political situation in the eastern Mediterranean.

No doubt there will be sporadic fighting for a few days, and considerable political manoeuvring before a new order is firmly established in Athens and Nicosia. The military situation on Cyprus is still far from satisfactory.

More Optimistic

The U.S. government, however, is pleased by the political developments in both Greece and Cyprus. Even Kissinger, who played a key role in the settlement and was optimistic from the start that a major Greek-Turkish war could be avoided, and had not dared to hope that the military junta in Athens would summon former Greek Premier Constantine Caramanlis back from exile in Paris to form a civilian government of national union.

Washington is also pleased that Glafkos Clerides, Speaker of the Cypriot House of Representatives under the regime of Archbishop Makarios, has replaced Nikos Sampson as interim President of Cyprus.

Clerides is particularly close to the Turkish communities in Cyprus, and Caramanlis has retained contact with the banished Greek King, Constantine, in Rome. Accordingly, it is not ruled out here that the monarchy may make a comeback in Greece, as it is likely to do in Spain.

Meanwhile, consultations are continuing between the United States and Britain over the future of Archbishop Makarios. This will be for the Cypriot people to decide, and while London and Washington are not wholly in agreement about Makarios, the main difference is that Britain is a co-guarantor of the independent constitutional Government of Cyprus, and the United States, whose enthusiasm for Makarios is not unbounded, has no such official responsibility.

For the future, the main thing is that the allies have rediscovered that they can be effective when they work together on common problems. In the latest war between Israel and the Arab states, the Europeans complained that Kissinger was not consulting them on military moves that might affect their vital interests.

At the same time, Kissinger was complaining publicly that the European members of the alliance were excluding the U.S. from their talks on the energy crisis and other matters and were confronting him with decisions whenever they were able to agree, which wasn't often.

Since the installation of new governments in London, Paris and Bonn, however, there has been a new spirit of co-operation. Over the past few days, Kissinger was not only in constant telephonic conversation with the other allied foreign ministers, but also with key allied ambassadors here in Washington.

Even the Russians were helpful in the crisis, not so much by what they did but for what they refrained from doing. Their opportunities for obstruction at the United Nations could have been awkward, but they went along with the efforts to arrange the cease-fire. Now they are pressing for a stronger vote, but on a lower key than usual.

Washington is now eager to see a political transformation in Athens that will restore liberty to that country while retaining allied co-operation in the Greek bases on the mainland and in Crete.

Fundamental

This is regarded at the Pentagon as fundamental to the lines of communication between Europe and the Middle East, and the restoration of a civilian government would relieve the Nixon administration of charges that it was putting its strategic interests ahead of the freedom of the Greek people.

What Secretary Kissinger hopes to do now is to expand the allied co-operation into the economic field, and particularly to move forward to a better understanding on monetary control, trade and energy.

His argument has been that the problems of inflation, trade, and defence are linked and cannot be eased without greater consultation and co-operation not only between Europe and the U.S. but also with Japan.

These are more difficult questions than avoiding a war between two of the allies, but there is a little more confidence here as a result of recent diplomacy that the alliance is back on a stronger foundation.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Rezoning

A letter has been sent to the mayor and council by three people who were among the 60 or more local residents at the meeting held on July 22, 1974, where we were invited to air our views on proposed re-zoning in the Summit Ave.-Jackson St. area.

1. We felt there were too many units planned for the three acres of the Wilderness Park Housing Co-operative.

2. We felt that the traffic on Summit and Jackson would be dangerous to children. There are two blind hill crests where motorists go too fast and do not see the children playing.

3. If the area is rezoned it will open the door for other developments, apartments and condominiums, which would detract from the rural setting existing at present.

The impression given at City Hall and to the press was that we are against children. This is far from true. Many of the residents have children, but we do not wish to endanger their lives by an unsuitable housing set up.

4. The question was asked about Co-operative members being able to will their shares or house to their heirs. This was not clear.

At one point we were told the $30,000 house would take 40 years to pay for at over $200 per month, in spite of B.C. government subsidies. At another point we heard this was not possible. If you leave the Co-operative you only get the down payment of $2,000.

We have heard of the assistance given to lower income families for this scheme.

We wish to know what real advantage is it to the participants in view of the above.

Our concern is not only with keeping our own environment unspoiled, but with the families who move into our area.

As far as we can see from the plan so far, it would not be advantageous to them or us. — Alice G. Carey, 1107 Summit Ave.

Balcony Gardens

The members of the James Bay new Horizons "Green Thumb Club" greatly regretted that so many people were disappointed at being unable to complete the Balcony Garden Tours last Wednesday.

Owing to unforeseen circumstances, we were unable to open two very beautiful gardens to the many interested flower lovers.

All the members of the club have been most grateful for the coverage given the projected tours by the Victoria Times, and for the interest and consideration shown by this newspaper.

With our sincere thanks for the cooperation which we received. — Kathleen Ransom, Chairman — "Green Thumb Club," 1412 Sincoe St.

Aircraft

Regarding the expansion of facilities at Victoria Airport, the letter of July 24th from C.A.S.E. was utter nonsense.

The use of larger aircraft means a decrease in fuel consumption per passenger since larger aircraft are more efficient. Furthermore, it is better to have persons travel by aircraft than by car, since autos are extremely inefficient and consume the majority of the 77 per cent of all transport energy mentioned by Mr. Mallard.

The wide-body aircraft such as the L1011, 747 and DC10 cause much less noise on take-offs and landings than older 707's, DC9 and DC8's. In addition, because they are larger, there would be fewer flights and hence less landings, takeoffs and noise.

I could not be more concerned with this problem. I live on the main flight path! — David J. Truman, 2553 Bevan Ave., Sidney.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of July 30, 1914

As indicated already in the Times, the situation which has arisen at the high school through the large pass list from the graded schools, as a result of the recent entrance examinations, has forced the school trustees to consider the augmentation of the staff. At the meeting of the city school board yesterday it was decided to take up the appointment of three teachers at once, and leave over the provision of another one till it is seen how many of the 327 pupils qualified to enter the school next term will join the classes. Principal Willis intimated through the municipal inspector that he estimated 96 would be leaving, making an increase of some 200 pupils in the present total.

Migrant Workers Flood Europe

OFF TO WORK IN THE FACTORY . . . SOME ARE BEGINNING TO REVOLT

By SHEILA ARNOPOULOS
Montreal Star

PARIS — For the past 10 years, the economic boom in Western Europe has been largely fuelled by some 10 million "guest workers" originally from Southern Europe, but now increasingly from Africa and Asia.

These people do the low-paid, undesirable jobs the Western Europeans no longer want to do.

In France, for example, there are about two million migrant workers representing roughly eight per cent of the total labor force. Since the early sixties, one newly created job in three has gone to a migrant.

Arabs from North Africa, Blacks from the former French African colonies, Turks, Pakistanis, and dwindling numbers of Portuguese, Italians, and Spaniards, dig the ditches, clean the streets, collect the garbage, construct new buildings, and man the auto factories.

As one European economist put it: "The immigrants increasingly play the role of a basic industrial proletariat in the Western European economies, while the native-born citizens comprise the 'new working class' of technicians, managers and supervisors."

Migrant worker policies suit countries who want cheap labor during periods of economic growth but for a number of reasons are loath to actually welcome these workers as permanent members of their societies.

Lately Canada has been toying with the idea of encouraging temporary migrant labor because the favored sources of immigration are starting to dry up. The Europeans who largely built Canada are staying home now that conditions and opportunities are better there.

Coming to Canada

Already, Canada is experimenting with migrant labor from undeveloped regions.

Six months a year, about 3,000 Caribbean workers come on short-term contracts to seed and harvest Ontario crops. Last year, Quebec imported Jamaican apple pickers for six weeks.

In addition, Canada now has others on limited duration "employment visas" working in factories. In Montreal many of these are Haitians. As temporary residents they are eligible for almost no social benefits.

Before Canada decides to alter its traditional settler immigration policy to include more and more temporary migrant workers, it should look closely at the European experience.

Unfortunately, in Europe, the governments have treated the migrants simply as "hands" to fuel the economy. They forgot they were bringing in people, many of them simple villagers totally bewildered by the alien ways of urban industrial life.

As a result, the "guest worker" policy in Europe, which initially seemed so successful, has backfired.

Docile at First

At the beginning, the migrant worker, who usually arrived without his family, was completely docile. Prepared to do almost any type of work, at any wages, he lived crammed with others in barracks, "bidonvilles," or furnished rooms, saving money to return home to start a better life.

Over the past two or three years, however, the migrant worker has revolted.

He is tired of being a helot for the privileged industrial nations who barely tolerate him.

He is fed up with the relatively poor wages, the bad housing, and angry at being excluded from certain social benefits, union positions and educational opportunities while he pays his share of the taxes.

In France, the revolt of the workers has been particularly severe.

One of the strongest expressions of this militancy was a six-week wild-cat strike at the Renault plant outside Paris in March, 1973. It was led by 370 migrant assembly-line workers who demanded "equal pay for equal work" and spread to a corps of 12,000 semi-skilled, 75 per cent of them migrants.

In other industries, migrants followed suit. In addition, there have been rent strikes to protest against inadequate living conditions, hunger strikes challenging stricter government deportation regulations, occupation of manpower offices, and demonstrations in the streets.

Migrant worker committees and groups have been formed. One of the most important is an Algerian organization which publishes a magazine and a newspaper lamenting poor conditions of Algerians in France and promising more jobs in Algeria so that workers can go home as soon as possible.

Explosive incidents are common. Recently, for example, a group of people tossed a Molotov cocktail into a Paris police station as retribution for alleged brutal handling of some 50 migrants who had occupied a public building.

One of the main problems has been that none of the Western European countries has had sufficient all-encompassing social and educational policies for migrants, many of whom stay five and more years without any improvement in their condition.

According to French officials here, housing is still one of the major problems. Many of the workers still live in "bidonvilles" or overcrowded rooms in run-down neighborhoods.

Special educational programs have been slow in coming. Literacy classes are still few and far between.

Welcoming classes for migrant children barely exist with the result that foreign children often repeat grades, and in the process, retard native children.

Specialized manpower training programs still seem the preserve of French labor. Although by law, migrants can now take advantage of upgrading, so far only three per cent of the foreign workers have enrolled.

Hand in hand with haphazard or non-existent services to cushion the foreigners' encounter with the new conditions of modern industrialism, there has been a strong negative reaction of the native population toward migrants.

One French government official concerned with migrant workers put it this way: "The French have had it with the Arabs. We have about a million of them and that's enough."

Mostly Young Men

Most of the Arabs are Algerian men under 40 and live in France for prolonged periods under trying conditions without their families. For every six Algerian men, there is only one Algerian woman.

The French have mixed feelings about the Algerians. Hostile attitudes date back to the Franco-Algerian war.

However, what bothers the French most about the Algerians is that their language, religion and way of life are so totally different.

A few Algerians scattered throughout France would not make much difference. But the authorities are quick to point out that the "level of tolerance" of foreigners, which they put at 10 per cent, has been surpassed in centres such as Paris, Lyon and Marseilles.

The French resent the Arabs and the Blacks now flowing in mostly from the former French colonies because, as one official noted, "they are unassimilatable."

The French, of course, have done little to integrate them, not wanting them to put down roots. However, now that they have become a permanent feature of French society, the French complain the newcomers aren't capable of being Gallicized.

Anti-migrant feeling is strongest among those closest to them — the French workers. Recently, the inhabitants of a low-cost housing neighborhood outside Paris, complained bitterly because the government had given scarce accommodation to large numbers of migrants from Algeria, Tunisia, Senegal and Portugal.

One Renault assembly-line worker said this: "On the assembly line we work side by side with migrants . . . but it is absurd to think we can live together after work without conflict."

In France, the migrant worker problem has become so acute that the new government recently appointed a minister in charge of immigration. Formerly immigrants fell under a number of different ministries.

Informed sources expect the new minister, Andre Postel-Vinay, will step up services to migrants, but at the same time strictly control the flow-in and the stay.

Among some top French government officials there is a feeling that France should come to terms with its labor problem without the help of foreign workers. The current unemployment rate stands at 2.2 per cent.

"Better salary, hours and conditions will have to be introduced to attract French workers," said one official. Mechanization was cited too as an answer. Even today, Africans sweep the streets of Paris with a bunch of twigs tied together. Machines could be used.

With an impending recession of the energy problem, here, there will be cut-backs in foreign workers, with repercussions of course in the sender countries, where there is chronic unemployment.

However, in France, as in some other countries, the recession is a handy excuse to get rid of the foreigners who are now perceived as a threat to the "cultural identity" of the country.

Switzerland, in fact, is so concerned about "keeping Switzerland Swiss" that a referendum is being prepared for a fall vote which, if accepted, could result in instant expulsion of half a million foreigners.

International Issue

The migrant worker problem, however, is now recognized as an issue with international repercussions. It has evolved primarily as a debate between the underdeveloped nations which are exporting labor and the industrialized nations which are the importers.

In June the International Labor Organization devoted a portion of its annual conference to migrant workers and asked for measures against traffickers in illicit migrant labor, for equality of opportunity and treatment of migrant workers, and for extensive social policies in favor of them.

UNESCO recently initiated studies on the educational facilities in Europe for migrants, and OECD (Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development) is looking at the economic ramifications for both the developed and under-developed world.

The Canadian government's green paper on immigration, slated to appear soon, will show whether Canada has learned any lessons from the European experience and its international repercussions.

THE BUMPKIN OF ANOTHER ERA

THE TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

Dizzy Dean, who died the other day at 63, was born neither too soon or too late. He reached maturity in his trade, which was throwing baseballs past batters, at the age of 20 and became a famous personality just in time to lighten the years of the Great Depression in North America.

That was before athletes had become financiers, and before clubs hired public relations men to coach stars on how to make properly bland and innocuous statements. So Diz came across to the public as exactly what he was — a loud, boastful, ignorant, fun-loving hick from the Ozarks; a throwback to the kind of bumpkins who infested professional baseball in its early years, when Dean would have had too much competition to be noticed, except for his talent.

DEAN
. . . depression cheer

There have been better pitchers before and since, but none who so captivated the fancy of sports fans as did Dizzy in his glory year of 1934. He pitched every third day in the final weeks of the season, when the St. Louis Cardinals were reduced virtually to a two-man pitching staff, him and his young brother Paul; he won 30 games and the pennant; and he hardly ever stopped bragging.

The World Series of that year gave him an appropriate stage and a vast audience. In the first game he easily stifled the Detroit Tigers, a team loaded with .300 hitters, by a score of 8-3. Then he rubbed salt in the wound by remarking, "I didn't have my stuff out there today. Wait'll they see me when I'm really good." The Tigers had to wait only until the seventh and deciding game, when Dizzy and the Cardinals humiliated them 11-0 before their home fans.

There was an anticlimax, of course. Pitching in the World Series of 1938 on cunning and heart alone, after his arm had been permanently injured, Dean held the awesome New York Yankees at bay for seven innings. He was leading by a run when Frank Crosetti hit two long fouls into the stands — and then one on the right side of the foul pole, with a man on base. But by then Diz was firmly ensconced among baseball's immortals.

He became known to a later generation of fans as a baseball announcer, the only one of his kind. His "slud" for "slid" is part of the language, or should be. He would note that the baserunners had returned "to their respectable bases." If things got dull on the field, he would bellow a verse of "The Wabash Cannonball," or tell oft-told tales of the baseball exploits of "me and Paul." He was biased, and often openly contemptuous of pitchers who used fancy pitches like sliders and knuckleballs. The only honest kind of pitcher, he intimated, was the kind who could "r'ar back" and fire a high, hard one past any batter, the way he could in his prime.

In time, he gave way to smoother and more grammatical men, at least on the national networks. Like Huck Finn, they never succeeded in "sivilizin'" him. Thanks for the memories, Diz.

100-MILE HOUSE — Lunch with the Emissaries of the Divine Light includes spoon-bread, yogurt, salad, kelp pills, hot sweet tea made from sage and conversation about what the group is and whether or not it constitutes a religion.

On the other side of one of the long tables in the community dining hall Fred Traff and his wife Valerie.

They are assigned one of the cabins here. Valerie acts as parent, much of the time, to the community's children. Fred is publisher of the 100-Mile House Free Press.

About 12 years ago, Fred was manager of Johnston's Terminals at Powell River and considers himself to have been an able one. But he and Valerie felt their lives lacked meaning and purpose. They considered many ideas, including going to Uruguay to farm, but finally came here to the colony (if that's the word).

In material terms, they have far less than if Fred had remained with the transport company. Fred may make a 'draw' upon the community's funds for things which the unity agrees he needs but amassing savings is not a pursuit of the Emissaries.

He is, however, proud of the certificates plastering one wall of his office entrance — awards, including two firsts from the Canadian weekly newspaper association.

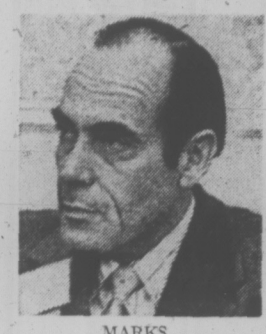
A slim and vivacious woman, King worked as Women's Page editor on the Free Press until she took a six-week holiday in Europe. When she returned she felt she needed to do different work. She now cooks, cleans, does everything, as she puts it, in 100-Mile House Lodge.

Later we are joined by Ross Marks. Of all the Emissaries, he is best known to British Columbia people. Ross was mayor of 100-Mile House since it was incorporated. He is now the vocal, visual, always down-to-earth president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities. Early history — graduate of Guelph agricultural college, manager of the ranch which became Canadian headquarters of the Emissaries.

He is a minister of the group. The head, named bishop, is Lord Martin Cecil who is at present visiting the international headquarters at Loveland, Colorado.

Ross, like Fred, is a symbol of the group's enterprises. It is involved in real estate developments, ranching, a large and prosperous motel and other smaller interprises. "I never had much respect for religious people who went up a mountain and spent their lives there thinking. I believe you must be part of the real, workaday world." So says Ross Marks.

But there is no general agreement to the question of whether Emissaries are a religious group, a philosophic group, a communist society (in the original sense of that word) or just a way of life.



MARKS
. . . workaday world

"I call it a church but I'm not sure that's the word," says Ross, "We have no creed, We have no dogma. There are no disciplines in respect to diet, or dancing or smoking or any of these things. Legally, we are simply incorporated under the B.C. Societies Act."

The essence, says Fred, is that human beings all have undeveloped potential for spiritually rich lives, for working in harmony with one another and with universal forces.

"But words don't serve well here. It's like ice cream. You can describe ice cream to me in words but I can never really know what ice cream is until I eat it myself."

The dishes are being collected. It's time to go back into the workaday world, each of us thinking our own thoughts about meaning and purpose in our lives.

WORLD OF PLEASURE

More Than Nixon at Stake

By ANTHONY LEWIS
New York Times

An admirer of President Nixon, sickened by Watergate but still opposed to impeachment, explained the other day: "Why bother impeaching him? He has been punished enough by what has happened, and that will be an example to future Presidents. It is better to stop now."

If the person of Richard Nixon were the issue, that argument would be persuasive. There is no great purpose in merely pursuing him into further disgrace. History will record him for what he is.

But the issue that faces Congress is not Nixon. The process that finally reached the stage of judgment in the House Judiciary Committee will decide what kind of government Americans are going to have, two centuries after winning independence. It will decide what kind of country we are.

That large sense of what is at stake is irresistably conveyed in the Articles of Impeachment proposed by the committee counsel, John Doar, and the supporting findings. Even after all the disclosures of the last two years, the list of things done by this President and his men is awesome.

Obstruction of justice, subornation of perjury, burglary, interference with the judicial process, illegal wiretapping for political ends, destruction of evidence, use of the tax system to punish enemies, misuse of police and intelligence agencies, tax fraud, contempt of Congress: those are some of the wrongs committed — all, as the draft resolution says, "to the manifest injury of the confidence of the nation and the great prejudice of the cause of law and justice."

That those things happened is not really in doubt. The question is what Congress should do about them — do to prevent them happening again. Some Congressional Republicans, reluctant to impeach, are evidently trying to convince themselves that there is some method short of impeachment. Rep. David W. Dennis, R-Ind., said, "We really ought to be thinking about some remedial legislation."

But the remedy already exists. It was written into the Constitution. Failure to use it now would necessarily appear to a degree as a condoning of what has happened. If a future President were lawless, would he be put off by the history of a predecessor who survived disclosure of such wrongdoing? Or would he be tempted to think that he could be more effective in the abuse of power?

In maintaining law and order in society, deterrence is a crucial factor. The potential criminal is most effectively deterred by the sense that punishment is likely to be swift and sure. It would not be much of a deterrent if judge or jury refused to enforce existing laws and suggested that others be passed.

But Nixon's final argument is that impeachment would weaken the Presidency — would leave future Presidents "afraid to make unpopular decisions," as he put it. But the articles proposed to the House committee by its counsel deal not with Nixon's policy decisions but with his illegal methods and abuses of trust. The institution of the Presidency would hardly be weakened by cleansing it of the corruptions that have sapped public confidence.

It is not just the character of the Presidency that these next weeks will define. It is our own character as a people: our values, our sense of legitimacy, our trust.

Will that special American reverence for the law survive? Will our wounded respect for institutions be revived, or will we become an altogether cynical people? Will we believe again in the possibility of leadership — believe that our Constitutional system can work?

Those are some of the larger questions that may be profoundly affected by the course of impeachment. Underlying them all is the idea of moral responsibility.

"I will not place the blame on subordinates . . .," the President said in his Watergate speech on April 30, 1973. "The man at the top must bear the responsibility." Yet now the man whose personal and political staff was rife with criminality, the man in whose name this country's most pervasive political crimes were committed, says that somehow it had nothing to do with him. Is that to be our standard of responsibility?

Standards are the issue in the end — legal and moral, national and personal. As the House committee heard John Doar last week, a Nixon supporter waiting outside said: "We elected him President and he has the right to use his judgment on what he should break into." Congress will decide whether that is the kind of country we are to be.

CHICAGO (AP) — The profiteers cashed in some chips Tuesday causing an erratic market on the Board of Trade. After successive gains in recent weeks most contracts opened higher, but fell sharply in early trading. Soybeans and corn opened at the limit and declined sharply, but regained strength to close at mixed levels.

The tumble began quickly after the opening as soybean meal and oil contracts surged downward, causing other markets to decline substantially. Most contracts touched the bottom limits in early, active trading. Oats opened mixed and declined to the limit of 6 cents a bushel. Wheat opened lower and fell sharply to the limit loss of 20 cents a bushel.

At the closing, soybeans were mixed,

Vestgron Mines

Vestgron Mines Ltd. reports that production at the Black Angel Mine, held by its wholly-owned susidiary Greenex A.S., has met its objectives although a net loss is recorded for the first six months of 1974.

Vestgron is 61.5 per cent owned by Cominco Ltd.

In its first semi-annual report, Vestgron shows total revenue of $2.7 million and a net loss of $1.8 million or 43 cents a share.

The company said in a statement that the figures do not reflect sales of concentrate production at the mine, on the west coast of Greenland, because the concentrate was stockpiled at the property and is only now being moved to market.

Pacific Western

Pacific Western Airlines Ltd. reports net earnings of $1,023,000 or 37 cents a share for the six months ended June 20, down 28 per cent from earnings of $1,424,000 or 52 cents a share for the corresponding period last year.

Operating revenues for the six-month period were $43 million up 19.6 per cent from the first half of 1973, but operating expenses were $38 million, an increase of 23.1 per cent from last year in the corresponding period, the airline said today.

Donald Watson, PWA president, said in a prepared statement: "The airport firefighters' illegal walkout together with the threatened air controllers' strike resulted in a loss of net earnings before tax in excess of $1 million.

"This, coupled with inflated fuel costs, passenger security screening costs, and an increase of 56 per cent in the prime bank lending rate have taken their toll," he said.

The airline said recently approved fare increases, effective July 21, further allowances for continuing inflationary factors and a rigid cost control program should bring improved results for the balance of the year.

Lumber Outlook 'Dismal'

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

British Columbia lumber production will be sharply curtailed in the last five months of this year, Council of Forest Industries president Gordon Draeseke said Monday.

"It is a little early yet to know how much it will decline but it will be by quite a substantial amount," he said in an interview.

Interior lumber production is already down 15 per cent from 1973 levels and will go lower, he said.

Coastal producers will follow the same pattern but several weeks later because of long-term contracts, he said.

Fully two-thirds of B.C.'s production goes to the U.S. market.

Draeseke said the curtailment will mean reduction of hours for a large number of mills in the province. Some will cut back from two shifts to one and others may go on a four-day week.

He said the curtailment would vary from company to company responding to the market. Companies only produce lumber they can sell and most are faced with requests to defer some of their shipments.

"It will be a month or more before we can get a statistical picture of the curtailment."

He said the cutback would be general among all producers across the province and will be quite severe compared to production in the last six months of 1973.

The market for B.C. lumber is not expected to improve until well into 1975, he said.

Draeseke was commenting on an announcement by Weldwood of Canada that it would reduce production in the last half of 1974.

Weldwood president Gordon Boswell said the decline in the lumber market was accompanied by sharp increases in the cost of production.

"The outlook for the B.C. wood products industry in the third quarter is not promising," Boswell said.

"In the face of sharply declining demand for lumber and plywood, in both export and domestic markets, substantial increases in wages and other operating costs, we anticipate having to curtail production in our B.C. coastal mills."

While Weldwood was the first company to declare it was faced with the prospect of curtailing production, MacMillan Bloedel earlier said it was under pressure from its customers to defer lumber shipments.

While the market for lumber has turned soft, companies that are well-diversified in pulp and newsprint remain in fairly good shape because of the strong market for those products at this time.

Atco to Build Port Alice Camp

CALGARY (CP) — Atco Structures Ltd. said Monday it has been given the contract to build and provide construction camp facilities for Rayonier Canada Ltd.'s Port Alice pulp mill on Vancouver Island.

A statement from the Calgary-based company said the camp will include temporary and permanent housing for the eventual workforce of 240 men on the first stage of the $40-million construction project.

The company has already supplied housing for a 60-unit camp, including six 42-man accommodation complexes, two six-man motel units and a 12-unit, 250-man kitchen-dining-recreational complex.

Delivery of the initial order is in the final stage and involves shipping the units by barge from Vancouver to Beaver Cove on Vancouver Island and then by truck to Port Alice.

JAPAN BUYS 260 HOUSES

Manufactured housing worth about $2 million has been sold to Japanese buyers as a result of contacts made by a B.C. trade mission which returned to the province a month ago.

Contracts and agreements to purchase have been made by Overseas Sales and Imports Ltd., of Vancouver, for 260 pre-fab units to include Canadian-made fixtures such as exterior doors, electrical goods and carpet.

The company's president, John Eto, took part in the June mission along with other housing manufacturers which also made several million dollars worth of sales as reported previously.

The Vancouver company reports it has had further inquiries for housing from Taiwan and Hong Kong, and will be taking tenders from Canadian suppliers of hardwood flooring to fill an order for 1.1 million square feet to be used in gymnasium construction.

Yanks Add Another To Futility Streak

By The Associated Press

Another game was added to New York Yankees' futility streak in Boston's Fenway Park Monday night when the Red Sox clipped them 2-1 in 11 innings. That makes 11 straight losses in Boston for the Yankees—and 20 in their last 21 games there.

If the Yankees are starting to believe in hexes, they got some more evidence Monday night. The Red Sox managed only three hits and won the game in the 11th without the aid of a hit.

Elsewhere in the American League Monday, Baltimore Orioles trimmed Milwaukee Brewers 6-2, Detroit Tigers clubbed Cleveland Indians 8-2, Texas Rangers trounced Kansas City Royals 10-1, and Oakland A's outscored Chicago White Sox 11-9.

The last time the Yankees managed a victory in Boston was last July 31.

He held the Red Sox hitless through five innings until Dwight Evans bounced a sharp single to left. And he held the Red Sox scoreless until, with two out in the eighth, Evans slugged a tying homer high into the left-field screen.

Evans' homer matched Bill Sudakis' solo blast in the fourth inning, and the score stayed 1-1 until the 11th.

Carl Yastrzemski led off the 11th against New York reliever Sparky Lyle and drew a walk. Bob Montgomery laid down a sacrifice bunt but Lyle threw wildly to first. Then Rick Burleson walked on four pitches, filling the bases.

Four Detroit batters sent first-inning homers into the stands, causing any late arrivals to miss a major league record.

Never before had a team hit four homers in the first inning, although four teams have hit five home runs in a single inning and the four-homer mark has been reached 17 times.

Al Kaline, Bill Freehan and Mickey Stanley belted consecutive homers of Fritz Peterson, and two batters later, Ed Brinkman connected off Steve Kline.

Len Randle and Mike Hargrove delivered two-run singles and Jeff Burroughs hit his 17th homer of the year for Texas to help Ferguson Jenkins pick up his 14th win in a game delayed one hour and 36 minutes by rain.

Look Out, Maury, Lou's Closing In

By The Associated Press

Lou Brock continued his explosive base-stealing pace Monday while helping St. Louis Cardinals beat Chicago Cubs 11-2 in a National League baseball game.

"Winning games is important, not setting records," Brock said after stealing his 65th base of the season and 700th of his career.

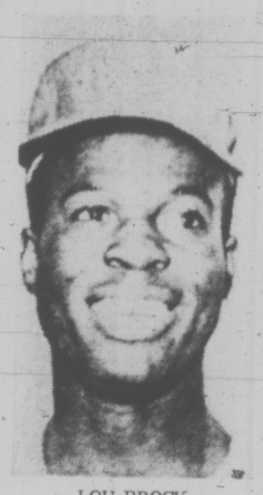
"But when the competition is tight and the challenge is there, then you find yourself doing things you didn't think were possible."

Brock, closing in on Maury Wills' single-season record of 104, also moved up on the all-time list into some exclusive company.

Only four other players in baseball history have stolen 700 or more bases—Ty Cobb (892); Eddie Collins (743); Max Carey (738) and Honus Wagner (701).

"Yes, I remember once saying that 700 stolen bases was my goal," Brock said, acknowledging a reporter's question. "I'm surprised it came this quickly, especially considering the start I had last year.

"I was out on 10 of my first 23 attempts. That was when 700 looked tough. Then I stole 60 of my next 70. That turned it around."



LOU BROCK
. . . winning important

In Monday's other National League games, New York Mets nipped Montreal Expos 4-3, Los Angeles Dodgers hammered Atlanta Braves 10-2; Philadelphia Phillies routed Pittsburgh Pirates 13-1; San Diego Padres stopped Cincinnati Reds 3-2 and Houston Astros trimmed San Francisco Giants 7-2.

Along with his steal, Brock singled twice and scored twice while Ken Reitz and Joe Torre both homered for St. Louis.

Brock singled in the first inning and stole second. At this point the game was stopped for a brief ceremony during which the umpires uprooted the bag and presented it to Brock. Then Brock scored on a single by Ted Simmons, putting St. Louis ahead to stay.

John Milner belted a two-run homer in the eighth inning, powering New York over Montreal for the Mets' fourth consecutive victory.

Jim Wynn knocked in four runs, including two on his 24th home run of the baseball season, helping Los Angeles snap a three-game losing streak with an easy triumph over Atlanta.

bill walker

What people tend to forget is that Don Moorhead "played hurt" most of last season, Jim Young told the first touchdown luncheon of the season at the Red Lion Monday. And this year, he is just fine.

Jim Young is otherwise known across Canada as "dirty-thirty" of the B.C. Lions, and is having a book published under that title this fall. So maybe people should listen.

Monday, Jim put himself on the spot in a question period after lunch, didn't lose any yards, saw new hope for the Lions this year, predicted the CFL will survive, and defended quarterback Moorhead to the hilt.

"Don is No. 1," he said "and in two or three years he will be the best of all the others in the CFL. What most people won't realize is that last year he was hurt most of the time."

First, Moorhead was out of action with a shoulder injury, then he had a bad ankle which troubled him right until the end of the season. In all he missed four or five games. And as it was the Lions finished third.

Young also defended the B.C. Lions' policy of building for the future, as opposed to attempting to buy a Grey Cup.

"It's a fallacy to think that you can buy a football team," he charged. "It doesn't work that way. A football team must be developed. 'Fire the coach' used to be the drill in the past. I think we had four coaches the first five years I was on the Lions. Now, this year's team has had a chance to develop, and I think most of the players appreciate the way the coaches have handled the situation. Everyone knows where they stand."

'Attitude' Key to New Look

The former Schenley winner, Young called the Lions' new look, "attitude".

"There has been a different approach this year. And if this is what might make a winner, Young explained too that one reason he thought the Lions didn't pick up pass-catching great Terry Evanshen of the Montreal Alouettes, was that Evanshen "couldn't beat out either of our wide receivers, Slade Willis or Brock Aynsley."

Sure, it was the right thing to say, but just the same it probably wouldn't have worked out that way if the Lions thought they were in trouble. And hopefully the only real trouble they do face is in the future when all-star running back Johnny Musso returns to action in September.

"We just could have a problem," said PR director Grant Kerr . . . too many backs". But that's a happy problem and one that will be hurdled if and when. Musso at present is out of action having had an operation on his leg. He should return in September, and it could cause a manpower issue.

Meanwhile, Young revealed a few other thoughts, such as:

"Astroturf can't touch natural grass; you grow up on grass; on grass you can get a feel you can't get on the new turf. Still, nothing ruins a football game like a mud bath . . . which you don't get now." He also pointed out the community value of the mod sod, the first year in Empire Stadium the number of events increased from 14 to 92. So you have to like it.

CFL Calibre Unappreciated

As to the World Football League, "it can't hurt football in Canada. It can only help. Besides, our game is better.

"People don't realize that the calibre of football in Canada has improved tremendously in the past few years, and right now it isn't that much different than the NFL.

"The game has really developed. You don't see it unless you're involved in it."

On defence, "our defence is as good as any in the league. The addition of (Bill) Baker, has the whole team psyched up. He makes the others do things."

On Saskatchewan, "hopefully the Riders won't be as good. Edmonton gave it to them (in their opener) and maybe they won't have the spirit they usually have any more."

On the possibility of jumping to the WFL, "I was drafted by Toronto, now Memphis; I talked to John Bassett and could have been the oldest rookie anywhere, but I'm staying here."

On salaries, "CFL salaries aren't high, and football salaries aren't high on what is produced in comparison to hockey, twice as high, basketball, three times . . ."

Later he pondered:

"Hey, that's a great idea . . . having a sponsor who makes bread. (This was in reference to McDonalds Bread, a local radio broadcast sponsor of Lions' games).

"That's what football players should have more of . . . bread."

"Dirty thirty" had scored at lunch. Hopefully the Lions can do as well on the field.

'We've Lost Strike,' Admits Bears' Tackle

By The Associated Press

The National Football League players' strike entered a critical stage today with the resumption of talks and rank-and-file criticism of the players association's negotiating tactics.

Efforts to settle the 30-day-old strike were scheduled to resume this afternoon in Washington under the supervision of the federal mediation and conciliation service's chief, W. J. Usery.

Usery met Monday with representatives of the NFL Players Association and planned to talk with the NFL Management Council, bargaining agent for the owners, today before resuming negotiations.

Usery said he hoped now that "we can get both sides down to hard, good-faith bargaining. That is what we desire and are working for and we hope an agreement can be consummated."

Meanwhile in Chicago, offensive tackle Bob Asher of the Bears said "it's getting obvious we've lost the strike. The owners aren't budging."

They were quarterback Joe Gilliam, safety Dennis Myer, defensive end Craig Hanneman, defensive tackle Steve Furness, and wide receivers Barry Pearson, Glenn Skolnick and Dave Davis.

Another notable defection was that of quarterback Greg Landry, who joined Detroit's Bloomfield Hills, Mich., camp but won't play for the Lions in exhibition games until the strike is settled.

Other players who abandoned the strike Monday included lineman Kent Branstetter of Green Bay, lineman Larry Smiley and defensive back Jackie Wallace of Minnesota Vikings, linebackers Jim Youngblood, Rick Kay and Jim Peterson, and tackle Tim Stokes of Los Angeles Rams, running back Billy Lefear and defensive end Lester Sims of Cleveland Browns, wide receiver Preston Riley of Atlanta Falcons, defensive back Eldridge Small of New York Giants, Ira Gordon of San Diego Chargers, safety Jeff Severson of Houston Oilers, offensive tackle Gerry Palmer of Baltimore Colts, and Hank Bjorklund and Mike Adamle of New York Jets.

Sports on TV: How Much Is Too Much?

By NEIL AMDUR

NEW YORK (NYT) — Professional football games will be available six days a week on United States television in August, but Leonard Kessler has had it as an armchair quarterback.

"I feel saturated," said Kessler, an author and illustrator from New City, N.Y., echoing the sentiments of many overwhelmed sports slaves. "Last year, when they finally got to the Super Bowl, I was super bored. This whole proliferation of sports has accelerated to such a crazy pace that I enjoy watching a Doris Day movie now."

Kessler apparently is not alone. Nielsen television ratings indicate a decline in the total number of viewers for the average sports telecast in the last two years, from 13,000,000 in 1972 to 12,740,000. Viewer interest also has dropped significantly, according to the Nielsen numbers, in such prestige sports as professional football, college football, pro basketball and hockey.

Despite the reverse trend, television still ranks as the most important source in reshaping the economic structure and social values on the expanding sports scene. It has stablized whole leagues, created events and personalities and emerged as an intensely competitive medium that often sells itself as much as its feature attractions.

The three commercial networks in the United States now carry 1,000 hours of everything each year from baseball to barrel-jumping, and sport accounts for about 11 per cent of total network time, almost double the total of a decade ago. That may be a heavy dose for the average viewer in one year, the networks concede. But how much is too much, they argue?

"I've felt there's been too much sports on television," acknowledged Ronald E. Bain, the director of sports at the Columbia Broadcasting System. "The question is when is the viewer going to find that? From what we've been able to determine, it does not appear that we've reached the saturation point yet."

Many men regard the start of the new 12-team World Football League, with its pitch toward weeknight summer audiences, as no worse than the multitude of morning game shows, afternoon soap operas and evening reruns.

"Sometimes I think there's not enough sports on television," said Hilary Lipsitz, a Manhattan film and record producer. "The other stuff on television is so dreadful that I seldom watch anything but movies or sports. Nobody sticks a gun at your head and makes you watch a sports event."

Television's role involves more than watching someone throw bottles at Pete Rose. The entertainment success of pro football on Monday night prompted a number of civic and religious organizations, town councils and bowling leagues to shift traditional meeting dates. They were afraid of losing out to television.

Family sports have profited from television's audience potential. The ratings for the professional bowlers' tour have increased from 7.2 to 9.1 in the last five years.

Tennis, once a game for the classes, is enjoying record appeal and increased ratings for the masses, although network officials believe the game is being overexposed on television.

Television's strongest impact in sports, besides being able to reach millions of fans in a single event, may be in showcasing individuals who often fulfil roles thrust upon them by a public hungry for heroes and villains.

In June, Evel Knievel, the daredevil motorcyclist, whose bizarre feats have been carried on television, showed up at Manuche's restaurant here. He caused more buzzing among the patrons than a heavyweight boxing champion.

Fergie's Going Strong And Leads Point Parade

The way he's playing these days, City Amateur and Island Open champion Cec Ferguson appears a shoo-in as the biggest point collector in this year's Island Cup matches.

Based on points accumulated in various Island tournaments, the 10 top amateurs will face the 10 leading professionals in singles and foursomes competition for the Francis Winspear Trophy late in September.

Last year's inaugural series, if you'll remember, wound up in a draw.

Points still will be available from the CFAX-Metro Toyota Open at Cedar Hill and the Mt. Brenton Open at Chemainus, but Ferguson has a big edge as the individual leader. He has picked up 562½ points from appearances in four of the six Island tournaments played to date.

Ferguson, a member of the provincial Willingdon Cup team will leave in two weeks' time for the Canadian Amateur championship at Winnipeg. And he seems to be right on his game. Fergie belted out a three-under-par 69 Sunday at Gorge Vale despite a triple bogey

Also warming up for the Canadian event, Glen Meadows' Mike Zichey hit his course with a one-under 71. Zichey was three over at the turn (39) but toured the back nine in 32, four under par

Following are the unofficial point totals for the Island Cup matches:

Professionals — Wakeham 380; Dave Ewart, Campbell River, 150; Ron Cush, Cedar Hill, 90⅝; Al Zimmerman, Glen Meadows, 90; Don Billsborough, Uplands, 85; Doug Silverberg, Glen Meadows, 77½; Mike Parker, Victoria, 77½; Norm Boden, March Meadows, 75; Doug Mahovlic, Victoria, 75; Robbie Ferguson, Victoria, 75, Laurie Carroll, Golfland, 45.

Vancouver's 10-man junior team defeated Victoria handily at Gorge Vale on Sunday to sweep the annual home-and-home series. The result will send Victoria District Golf Committee officials looking for more suitable scheduling next year.

Half of the originally-named team missed at least one of the two rounds. Sunday, for example, City junior champion Jim Rutledge was in San Diego prepping for this week's world junior tournament while other top players were attending the North Island Invitational at Comox.

In the first match, played at Vancouver, Brad MacLeod and Lee Haskell both were missed.

Cowichan's Laurie Peet, incidentally, won the Comox event by defeating Marine Drive's Kelly Murray on the second extra hole of a sudden-death playoff. Both scored two-under-par 68s to set up the playoff.

SHORT CHIPS: Stan Darlington is getting to appreciate the fourth hole at Royal Colwood . . . He scored his first hole-in-one on that par three, did it again last week . . . Colwood's members defeated Marine Drive 35-25 in their annual inter-club match . . . Cedar Hill member Walter Critchley came up with an age-matching round by scoring an 83 . . . Gordie Moore captured the Cedar Hill Trophy by posting a net 117 for the 36-hole competition . . . Bob Main was runner-up with 118 while Greg Barnes, 67-73—130, led the gross scorers, finishing four blows ahead of Norm Haskell . . . Eaton's Invitational for the Gordie Howe Shield comes up Friday at Colwood and the draw should be making its way into print at mid-week . . .

Durante In Top Form

COQUITLAM — Getting a 10-point performance from league-leading scorer Dave Durante, Coquitlam Adancs trounced Vancouver Burrards 18-9 Monday night.

The win moved Coquitlam to within two points of the second-place Burrards in the Western Lacrosse Association standings and opened a six-point gap between the Adancs and last-place Victoria Shamrocks.

Durante scored six goals and added four assists to take his total to 91 points, 15 more than second-place Ron MacNeil of the Shamrocks and Paul Parnell of New Westminster Salmonbellies.

Jim Aitchison scored four goals and had four assists for the winners while Keith Scott and John Allen scored three goals each. Bob Salt scored three times for Vancouver.

The clubs meet again tonight in Vancouver while the Salmonbellies and the Shamrocks clash Wednesday night at 8 at Victoria's Memorial Arena.

Junior Scramble Tightens

SURREY — Burnaby Cablevision has already clinched first place but the race for the other playoff spots in the Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League is getting tighter.

Victoria McDonalds are in second place but only two points behind them are Richmond Roadrunners and Surrey Salmonbellies.

Surrey pulled into a tie for third with Richmond Monday night by stunning Burnaby 12-10. It was only the third defeat in 22 games for the Cablevision squad.

Two-goal scorers for Burnaby were Mike Holden, Bill Kirkland and Rick Kennedy and the other scorers were Dan Perreault, Steve Shipley, Kelly McLenaghen and Joe Jamison.

Argos Like Workers; Canadian at Slotback

HAMILTON (CP) — If the Canadian Football League ever lowers its import limit, coach John Rauch of Toronto Argonauts will know how to deal with the reduction.

Rauch will get along with only 14 imports tonight, one under the CFL limit, when the Argos play Hamilton Tiger-Cats at Ivor Wynne Stadium in the second game of the season for both clubs.

The added Canadian will be Ernie Carnegie, a 20-year-old halfback who will replace import slotback Emory Blake, who was injured in last week's Eastern Football Conference opener against Ottawa Rough Riders.

"This might be a Canadian football league yet," Rauch said Monday. "Actually, our policy is—if a guy is available and he's a worker we'll give him a shot.

"Carnegie checks out that way. He had a good training camp and we're glad to give him this chance."

Legislation introduced in Parliament this spring would have required CFL teams to carry more Canadians. The legislation, which was aimed primarily at keeping the World Football League out of Canada, died when the Liberal government was defeated.

Carnegie, who played football last year for a community college and junior football team, isn't likely to see much action. He is listed as backup to running backs Ed Shuttlesworth and Doyle Orange.

But the shuffle caused by Blake's injury will get another Canadian into the starting lineup. Tight end Peter Muller will get Blake's slotback job and rookie Canadian Larry Simpson will play tight end.

That's the only change planned in the lineup that surprised the Grey Cup champion Riders 19-3 last week.

The Ticats lost their opener to Montreal Alouettes last Wednesday 20-12, but they plan only one change. Rookie Bubba Bridges will move to end from tackle on the defensive line and Fred Grambeau takes over tackle.

Game time tonight is 8 p.m. EDT. The game will not be televised.

Hunter Traded

BUFFALO (AP) — Buffalo Bills of the National Football League announced Monday they have acquired quarterback Scott Hunter from Green Bay Packers.

Hunter was acquired in exchange for running back Pete Van Valkenberg and defensive tackle Steve Okoniewski.

Hunter was the Packers' starting quarterback in 1972, and he led Green Bay to a Central Division championship. In his three NFL seasons, Hunter has completed 197 of 447 passes for 2,904 yards.

With a total of 328 from the best four of six scores Monday at Glen Meadows Golf Club, Cedar Hill held the edge over the host club which had 336. Uplands was in third place with 341, Victoria was in fourth spot with 346, Colwood next with 366 and Gorge Vale last with 388.

Cedar Hill's scores came from John McMillan with an 81, Roy Harrington with 82, Mike Cook with 82 and Mike Stewart with 83. Best round of the day was a seven-over-par 79 by Don Gowan of Glen Meadows.

The 36-hole competition ends today.

Skala Survives A Late Charge

WHEELING, W. Va. (AP) — Carole Jo Skala survived blustery winds and a late charge by Jane Blalock Sunday to win the first tournament played in Wheeling by the Ladies' Professional Golf Association.

Mrs. Skala fired a final-round 73, one over par, to finish the 54-hole torunament with a four-under par total of 212. Her earlier rounds on the 6,155-yard Speidel course were 69 and 70.

Winner of the LPA's Montreal event earlier this month, she collected $5,000 for Sunday's triumph.

Six shots back in second place starting Sunday's closing round, Miss Blalock toured the hilly layout in 71 for an even-par total of 216.

Finishing with a 68, the tournament's best round, Kathy McMullen took foruth place at 218, one stroke in front of Debbie Austin, who had 72 Sunday.

George Richey of Victoria is one of two B.C. wrestlers chosen on the 11-man Canadian Amateur Wrestling Association team, which will compete in the world championships at Istanbul, Turkey, Aug. 29 to Sept. 1.

He will also compete in a 15-nation meet in Poland and a dual meet in Romania before going to Turkey. The other B.C. wrestler chosen is Steve Martin of Vancouver at 149 pounds.

Lions Drop Watters

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions will activiate veteran linebacker Dan Dever for Wednesday's Western Football Conference game in Winnipeg against the Blue Bombers.

The Lions Monday released rookie linebacker Lorne Watters from the University of Calgary to make room for Dever.

Dever, 28, played out his option last season with the Grey Cup champion Ottawa Rough Riders. The Lions gave up their second-round 1975 draft choice to acquire the six-foot, 200-pound Canadian, a six-year veteran.

BALTIMORE (AP) — All-star third baseman Brooks Robinson of Baltimore Orioles is expected to be out of action for four or five days with a pulled muscle in his rib cage. Firefighters Near Title

One more win will give Victoria Firefighters the B.C. Senior Babe Ruth baseball championship.

Firefighters blanked Kamloops Jay Rays 1-0 at Royal Athletic Park Monday night behind the four-hit pitching of Wayne Krimmer to reach Wednesday's final, which is set for 6:30 p.m.

Kamloops plays again tonight in the losers' bracket at 8:30 against the winner of a 6:30 game between North Vancouver and Selkirk Selects. North Vancouver got through to play Selkirk by downing Nanaimo 3-2 in Monday's other game.

Krimmer and Warren Terry of Kamloops were involved in a pitching duel until the sixth inning when Doug Irving singled for Victoria. Robbie Parris sacrificed Irving to third and, with Brock Coupar faking a bunt, Kamloops catcher Bill Swaine missed a high pitch and Irving scored on the passed ball.

Nanaimo, which had been averaging more than eight hits a game in the tournament, outhit North Vancouver 10-3 but committed six errors. Vancouver played errorless ball.

'Love' Reward Refused

COLOGNE (Reuter) — A West German woman who promised an "ecstatic night of love," to the man who found her lost Yorkshire terrier had the dog returned Monday — by the Cologne fire department.

But the fireman refused to take the 30-year-old blonde up on her offer and accepted drinks instead, the Cologne Express reported.

The terrier, Monki, was picked up by a salesman about seven miles from the woman's home Sunday and was turned over to the fire department.

Explaining her unusual offer, the housewife said she and her children had been so sad since the dog ran away two weeks ago that their family life had turned sour.

NEW YORK — Charles A. Lindbergh Jr., the first man to cross the Atlantic Ocean alone in an airplane, is in Columbia Presbyterian Hospital today with an undisclosed illness.

The hospital would not say why the 72-year-old flier was admitted or what his condition was, but Lindbergh cancelled a scheduled appearance Sunday at the midwestern governor's conference in Minneapolis, reportedly because of the flue.

LOS ANGELES — Reporter William Farr, central figure in one of longest and most celebrated U.S. press-judiciary clashes, was sentenced to the maximum five days in jail and fined $500 Monday by Superior Court Judge Charles Older.

Older lamented that he could not make the sentence harsher.

Farr has refused for three years to reveal the names of two lawyers who broke Older's gag order by giving Farr information for a story during the trial of the Charles Manson family for the Sharon Tate murders.

HONG KONG — Peking has turned down an application for visas by the Rolling Stones, guitarist Mick Taylor, who joined the group three years ago, said here today.

Taylor, who is here on holiday said: "I think they (the Chinese authorities) didn't want their youth turning out like the decadent deplorable youth of the West."

'Biggest Fish War' Threatened

COPENHAGEN (AP) Denmark's minister of fisheries warned today that extension of Iceland's fishery limits to 200 miles might force the Common Market to close the entire North Sea to outside fishermen.

Niels Anker Kofoed was quoted by the Danish business daily Boersen as saying that a would touch off "the biggest unilateral move by Iceland finish war in history."

He was commenting on recent statements by the Icelandic government indicating that it does not exclude the possibility of extending fishery limits beyond 50 miles.

The International Court of Justice last week ruled against even the current 50-mile limit claimed by Iceland, but Iceland has refused to accept the court's jurisdiction.

"Either the Icelanders would have to depart from the scene, or we would, for instance, have to enforce restrictions on imports from Iceland," Kofoed said.

'MAMA' CASS

BIG MAMA DIES

LONDON (AP) — Mama Cass Elliot, the sweet-voiced pop singer who was found dead in her London apartment Monday, probably choked on a ham sandwich, her doctor says.

An autopsy report was due today, and Dr. Anthony Greenburg said it would probably show that "she died as a result of choking on a sandwich while lying in bed and inhaling her own vomit."

But he added that she "was a very big lady' and may have had a heart attack.

Dot MacLeod, the singer's secretary, said she found the 33-year-old star's body Monday afternoon slightly propped up in her double bed in the six-room apartment she was occupying during engagements in Britain. The television set was on, and a ham sandwich and a soft drink were beside her pillow, Miss MacLeod said.

The singer, who rose to fame in the 1960s as the leading Mama of The Mamas and the Papas, completed a two-week engagement at the Palladium Saturday night. She was preparing to start a tour of Britain.

Dr. Greenburg said she had been dieting and had "been doing quite well." She told an interviewer from The Times a few days ago she lost 80 pounds in the last year. She had weighed 228 pounds.

Miss Elliot's seven-year-old daughter by singer James R. Hendricks, Vanessa, was reported with her grandmother in Baltimore, Md.

Born Ellen Naomi Cohen in Baltimore, Md., she grew up in Virginia and Maryland and took the name Cassandra Elliot before going to New York at 19 to try for a stage career.

RESCUE WAS HIS ONLY DISTRESS

RHYL, Wales (UPI) — The coast guard sent boats into the Irish Sea when they saw a distress signal flying aloft on a yacht.

But when they arrived, a red-faced yachtsman in his underpants sheepishly confessed he did not realize his wet trousers, hoisted aloft to dry in the wind, formed an official rescue signal.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

The preliminary hearing of four persons on a five-count narcotics charge started Monday in provincial court, but Judge William Ostler banned the publication of evidence.

After the hearing, which is expected to last until Friday, Ostler will decide whether the four — Tereen Frances Zimmerman, 23, of Burnaby, and three men from Nanaimo: John Lyle Babcock, 27, Michael Reynard Lalain, 30, and Ronnie Richard Larsen, 28 — should stand trial.

They are charged with conspiracy to import and traffic in marijuana, importing and trafficking in marijuana and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

Two teen-aged boys found about 10 boxes of marijuana on Whiffin Spit in Sooke on May 18.

Police, called to the scene by a resident who spoke with the boys, found the number of boxes had grown to 21.

One man was arrested at the site after a stakeout and two were arrested at Sooke Harbour Marina. The woman was arrested in Burnaby.

A youth, who earlier pleaded guilty to a charge of theft over $200 and two counts of theft under $200, was fined $150 and placed on probation for a year.

Donald George Stewart, 18, of 6392 Oldfield, stole a radio worth $225 from a house on Tudor where he was working as a carpenter July 16.

He also took, while in the company of a juvenile, a tape deck worth $69 from a vehicle on the Yarrows Ltd. parking lot in the 1300-block Esquimalt July 4 and two tape decks worth a total of $49 from another vehicle on the same lot.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Stewart needed "a sharp reminder to keep his hands off other people's property."

Seven persons charged with a total of 17 counts after a Colwood RCMP constable was attacked in Metchosin July 21 were remanded to Wednesday.

Birkett asked for the adjournment and said they may face a different charge.

The charges laid July 22 include obstructing and assaulting a policeman, and followed a fracas at an adult softball game at Dunsmuir School.

Three persons were fined $75 for possession of marijuana: Darcy Hugh Burgon, 22, of 2717 Rock Bay; Robert William Baudains, 17 of 634 Cornwall, and Scott Carter Lewis, 18, of 1892 Cochrane.

In traffic court Francis Howard John, 23, of Ahousat, was fined $450 for impaired driving; Jimmy Bruce Mee, 25, of 1655 Chambers, was fined $400 for the same offence, and Melinda Hamlett, 30, of 2895 Colquitz, Jean Elizabeth Todd, 53, of 70 Beach and Sonny Olaf Nomland, 43, of 3063 Admirals, were each fined $350 for impaired driving.

Richard William Dodge, 20, of Work Point Barracks, Esquimalt, was fined $275 for driving with more than .08 per cent alcohol, and Robert George Gibb, 34, of 3820 Shelbourne, was fined $300 for the same offence.

INSULIN COST UP

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Prices of insulin, a standard product for lifetime therapy for many diabetics, have been increased 10 per cent, the manufacturer announced Monday.

Eli Lilly and Co. said sharply rising production costs for insulin and increased prices of the products forced the first price hike in 28 years.

Lilly also announced, however, its third price reduction in three years for an antibiotic, Keflex, or cephalexin monohydrate.

Fliers Lost in Kootenay

Eight planes are expected to join in a search today for a homemade plane with two people aboard that went missing Monday on a flight between Castlegar and Lethbridge.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Centre in Victoria said the search for Lloyd Fletcher, 62, and his son Ernie, 20, both of Burnaby, will be concentrated in the rugged mountainous region just east of Kootenay Lake.

The pair was on a flight from Vancouver to Regina. They had stopped in Castlegar for refuelling and left at 9:09 a.m. bound for Lethbridge where they expected to arrive three hours later.

Basford Refuses Extension

VANCOUVER (CP) — The mayor of nearby Richmond says Housing Minister Ron Basford has refused to give residents of an area to be used for the expansion of Vancouver International Airport more time to leave.

Mayor Gil Blair said after a meeting with Basford Monday that the minister said no useful purpose would be served in granting an extension past Thursday, the deadline set in March when the federal government expropriated 53 properties.

About 20 owners and their families and 50 tenants remain on the property, either leasing or renting their homes from the government.

About 39 owners are suing the government to increase the $2 million offered by the government to $3.5 million, the value at which consultants appraised the properties.

Guns, Girls Smuggled to Vesco

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government investigators have obtained information that weapons and prostitutes have been smuggled out of the United States to fugitive financier Robert Vesco and his associates, several knowledgeable sources reported Monday.

The weapons, described by one source as "enough for a small army," and the prostitutes were flown to Costa Rica aboard a private plane owned by Vesco associate Thomas Richardson, said the sources.

Richardson last week denied any knowledge of his plane's whereabouts, saying he has leased it to a firm called Connex Press Inc. Connex Press is controlled by Norman Lelanc, formerly of Montreal, one of Vesco's closest associates, according to various lawyers seeking to unravel Vesco's tangled financial affairs.

The SEC has charged Vesco, LeBlanc and 40 others with looting $224 million from a mutual fund.

According to one source, the guns were used to arm the bodyguards who protect Vesco in his Costa Rican hideaway. President Nixon's nephew, Donald Nixon Jr., who has worked for Vesco since 1971, is believed to be in Costa Rica with Vesco, the sources said.

Vesco currently is under federal indictment on charges stemming from a secret $200,000 contribution he made to the president's re-election campaign in an alleged attempt to influence an investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission. Evidence of the smuggling operation could be used to extradite Vesco from Costa Rica, the sources said.

The U.S. Customs Service acknowledged during the weekend that it is conducting an investigation of possible violations of the so-called neutrality act by Vesco associates. The neutrality act prohibits the illegal exportation of arms and ammunition to other countries, a spokesman explained.

12-MILE LIMIT PREFERRED

CARACAS (AFP) — India, Indonesia and Iceland joined Canada and five other states Monday in a formal consensus in favor of the 12-mile territorial sea limit and an additional "economic zone" out to 200 nautical miles.

The other countries were Chile, Mauritius, Mexico, New Zealand and Norway. Canada presented the consensus paper to a plenary session of the 150-nation UN conference on the Law of the Sea, which is in its sixth week of work here.

The issue of sea limits is being thrashed out in committee. Observers viewed the nine countries' decision to go directly to the plenary session as a gesture of impatience with the slowness of the committee proceedings.

West Germany, Peru and Turkey led strong opposition to acceptance of the paper by the session, arguing that it was the committee's business to draft a consensus on sea limits. A motion to admit the Canadian paper for referral back to committee was carried by 50 votes in favor to 38 against, with 39 delegations abstaining and the others absent.

The nine countries express what is generally regarded as the majority preference here for a "relatively narrow" territorial limit of 12 miles, linked with an extension of coastal-state jurisdiction over an economic zone extending out another 188 miles.

Canadian delegation leader Alan Beesley said the proposal was supported by "developed countries as well as developed countries" and represented a broad range of interests.

Legalize Prostitution —U.S. Bar

CHICAGO (AP) — Laws against prostitution are blatantly discriminatory toward women, invade individual privacy and should be dropped from state books, a committee of the American Bar Association recommends.

The recommendation is in a report that calls for the adoption of a resolutin which urges tion of a resolution which urges states to "repeal all laws which classify as criminal prostitution or solicitation by or on behalf of a prostitute."

The resolution is to be considered by the ABA's house of delegates at its annual meetings in August. Approval of the resolution by the full house and the ABA's board of governors will provide guidance to state bars and other lobbying groups before state legislatures.

The committee says there is no reason for a state to outlaw "commercial sex."

"Whether a person chooses to engage in sexual intercourse for pure recreation, or in exchange for something of value, is a matter of individual choice, not for governmental interference," the report states. Decriminalization might lead to a reduction of crime associated with prostitution, it says.

Carole Bellows, a Chicago lawyer and vice-chairman of the committee that approved the resolution, said the rise of the liberated woman, expanding notions about the right of privacy and a growing concern about so-called victimless crimes contributed to the committee's unanimous approval of the report at a meeting of its 20 members in May.

Housekeeping Aides Sue Manitoba Gov't

WINNIPEG (CP) — Nine women, named as plaintiffs for some 200 women employed as housekeeping aides at the Brandon Health Centre, the Selkirk Home for Mental Diseases and the Manitoba School for Retardates, have charged the Manitoba government with sex discrimination with regard to wages.

In a Court of Queen's Bench claim, the women contend the government is paying female housekeeping aides in those institutions substantially less than male institutional servicemen who perform basically the same work.

The women are seeking a declaration that the government is in violation of the Human Rights Act and the Equal Pay Act.

236 Battle Fire

NORDEGG, Alta. (CP) — Smoke from a 3,500-acre forest fire in the rugged Siffleur wilderness area hampered the attempts Monday of 236 men to control it.

Assisted by four helicopters, four fire bombers, two crawler tractors and four track vehicles, the men have been fighting the blaze since it was spotted Saturday afternoon about 130 miles west of Red Deer.

Woman Charged

EDMONTON (CP) — A city woman, Ruth Burnett, 31, has been charged with two counts of attempted murder in connection with an incident three months ago in which two young boys were given an overdose of drugs.

Police went to a city residence April 27 and found the two boys, aged 7 and 5, semi-conscious.

They were taken to Misericordia Hospital where they recovered.

No 'Interference'

REGINA (CP) — A Saskatchewan government spokesman Monday denied that new taxes imposed on the provincial oil industry last Jan. 1 constitute illegal interference with interprovincial trade.

George Taylor, representing the provincial gopyernment in a Court of Queen's Bench trial initiated by a Calgary oil company's challenge to the legislation, said the new taxes do not impair the right of the company — Canadian Industrial Oil and Gas Ltd. — to sell its oil to anyone anywhere at any price.

Autoplan Lawyer Calls Insurance Firms Arrogant

VANCOUVER (CP) — The private insurance industry was accused Monday of arrogance in its B.C. Supreme Court attack on the validity of Autoplan.

Lawyer John MacAlpine, representing the attorney-general, said the companies seem to think that they enjoy immunity from provincial laws because of their federal incorporation.

"Underlying the claim of dominion company status as expressed by their counsel from time to time is their assertion of the right to free competition or free enterprise," said MacAlpine.

"This would be a strange assertion to the legislature of this province in light of the Wootton royal commission report's finding that competition was singularly lacking in the insurance industry.

"Moreover, it is a posture of arrogance for the industry to contend after a period of in excess of 50 years of providing automobile insurance within the province that the elected representatives of this province are not free to turn to an alternative."

"In this action, the court is being asked to stifle the autonomy of the province and to stay its right to legislative innovation," he said.

MacAlpine suggested automobile insurance is within provincial jurisdiction just as much as the subject of workmen's compensation.

He said automobile insurance is aimed at the residents of the province and therefore falls within provincial jurisdiction under the British North America Act as a local matter concerning property and civil rights.

Former Envoy Dies

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — Arthur Watson, 55, former United States ambassador to France and a leader in making the IBM company a giant of international trade, died in hospital Friday. He had been injured in a fall at his home. His father was Thomas J. Watson Sr., who built IBM from a small upstate New York firm. The son joined the firm in 1949 and became chairman of IMM World Trade Corp. in 1963.

Motorcycle Death Toll Rises on U.S. Highways

NEW YORK (AP) — The 40-year-old executive who last Christmas bought a motorcycle because "well save on gas" may have been playing a deadly game.

By now he could be one of the 675 persons who lost their lives on motorcycles on highways in the United States through the first four months of 1974, the U.S. highway-traffic safety administration estimates.

Although the returns are early, motorcycle deaths to date are running more than 30 per cent ahead of 1973, in sharp contrast to 23.8 per cent decline this year in over-all traffic deaths.

Running side by side with the higher motorcycle death figures are dramatically higher cycle sales. The Motorcycle Industry Council, a Washington-based lobby group, estimates motorcycle sales have jumped about 50 per cent so far this year to roughly 700,000 to 750,000 new vehicles. The total cycle population now stands near five million, and is growing this year at a 32 per cent annual clip.

Bob Hicks, publisher of Cycle sport magazine, said the energy crisis gave many middle-class persons with little or no cycling know-how the excuse they'd been looking for "to get their courage up and do what they wanted to do in the first place."

About two-thirds of all motorcycle deaths involve drivers with six months or less experience. A study by the California department of motor vehicles shows 80 per cent of the drivers involved in accidents have less than one year of experience.

Turkeys in Danger

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian turkey industry is in danger of losing all its independent producers beause of inadequate returns, says Don Potter, secretary-manager of the Alberta Turkey Marketing Board.

The board met last week with Eugene Whelan, federal agriculture minister, to ask that imports be controlled and that the market be allowed to find its own level by supply and demand, said Potter.

He said the minister agreed to look at the situation.

Ruling Appealed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Frank Kowalchuk of Oakburn, Man., has appealed a lower court ruling which granted his wife a half interest in part of the land to which he holds title and to farm machinery and equipment.

Chief Justice A. S. Dewar ruled April 8 that Katie Kowalchuk, married in 1938 and separated from Mr. Kowalchuk in 1967, was entitled to a half interest in two of three sections of the farm as well as a half interest in the machinery and equipment be-

3 Charged For Tossing Water Bombs

WEST LINCOLN, Ont. (CP) — Two brothers and a juvenile were charged Monday with mischief causing bodily harm after "water bombs" hurled from a moving truck injured three persons and smashed several car windshields.

Provincial police said youths driving a pickup truck last Sunday night hurled plastic bags filled with water at the windshields of cars travelling in the opposite direction.

The truck was being driven through the Grimsby and Caistor Centre areas, about 10 miles southeast of Hamilton.

In about an hour, police said, six windshields were smashed and three people sent to hospital and treated for cuts. Three other drivers escaped injury.

'Give Us Another 26 Acres'

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Stalking the wild turnip in sunny Saanich has been such a success the agriculture department expects to offer more allotment gardens next year.

"Give us another 26 acres and we'll fill them," said a department official as Agriculture Minister David Stupich and reporters viewed the first 3½-acre plot given over to do-it-yourself vegetable growers 12 weeks ago.

A wide range of table vegetables covers the 142 plots at Patricia Bay Highway and Kent Road, mostly planted by city apartment dwellers trying to relieve the confines of high-rise life, or pensioners and young couples attempting to beat the cost of living.

A few have trimmed their 25 by 50-foot gardens with neat rows of flowers and patches of lawn, and most have tended their gardens carefully to enjoy what the agriculture department considers exceptionally good yields.

Stupich said he is looking for more unused land near urban population centres in Greater Victoria and the Van-Vancouver-Lower Mainland areas to try to meet the demand for home-grown garden vegetables.

There are two other allotment gardens under departmental supervision — 10 acres in Richmond that provide 250 plots, and 18 plots on private land near Wilkinson Road in Saanich.

The Pat Bay Highway gardens straddle Swan Creek on land owned by the highways department and they are relatively close to public transportation, are supervised and include irrigation for the $10 seasonal fee.

Gardening counsellor Jack Beastall, who with wife Hilda was an early advocate of allotment gardening, said he had offered advice to many novices in weekly visits to the acreage.

"The majority — whether they take home any vegetables or not — are getting the relaxation, the enjoyment of socializing with other people. It's a wonderful thing for apartment dwellers," Beastall said.

Helen Savoie, 853 Burdett, agreed with that. To her, visiting the plot and tending her crop is "the most exciting thing since my wedding day."

Another said it was fun to watch things grow.

Victor Jumago, 1007 Esquimalt, who hadn't gardened for about 10 years, was overjoyed at the quick rate of growth. He pulled a potato up by the roots to see if they were forming properly:

"I couldn't believe it — potatoes as big as my fist already."

Jumago expects to harvest 300-400 pounds of potatoes along with a full range of other vegetables his wife will be busy canning.

"I've already put down eight quarts of beets," she said.

Their total outlay has been only $40.

Firms Violating Consumer Laws, Province Warns

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria Chamber of Commerce has urged local merchants to re-examine their sales contracts following a warning from the department of consumer services that new provincial laws are being violated by many British Columbia firms.

Chamber manager Brian Small said the violations probably are quite innocent and simply a matter of not being aware of the new regulations of the Trade Practices Act.

Act director Michael Hanson, in a letter to the chamber, said merchants should immediately strike out any offending clauses as an interim measure while documents were being revised.

In general terms, the new provincial regulations make it an offence to imply that an article is at a bargain price if it is not, and that a large number of products are available at sale prices if in fact the supply is limited.

Any exaggeration designed to mislead the consumer is an offence under the new regulations.

Regulations regarding warranties and seizure of goods have also changed.

Hanson said he had detected several clauses in B.C. contracts that violated the new regulations.

He gave an example of a violation of the new seizure law:

"... and the dealer may take possession of the motor vehicle with or without process of law and concurrently bring suit against the purchaser for the unpaid balance."

Hanson said the law has been amended to say the dealer may repossess or sue but may not do both.

An example of a warranty violation:

Says Hanson: "Our Sale of Goods Act was amended some time ago to ensure that its implied warranties could not be disclaimed when new goods are sold."

He said the two examples were taken from among many contract violations and he urged companies to re-examine their contracts.

"We will be moving quickly to enforce the provisions of (the Trade Practices Act) which has now passed into law," Hanson said.

American Honors For Seaspan Crew

An admiral in the U.S. Coast Guard is coming to Victoria next Tuesday to pay tribute to the six-man crew of a Seaspan tug which helped save nine lives in Puget Sound last month.

A Seaspan spokesman said today Rear Adm. Chester Richmond, commander of the 13th coast guard district in Seattle, will arrive by helicopter for a luncheon arranged by Seaspan.

He will deliver individual "commendations" to the crew of the Seaspan Challenger — Capt. John Webb, mate Barry Fairall, deckhands Fred Wagner and Jerry Farley, cook Frank O'Halleron and engineer John Shaw.

About 3:30 a.m. June 18 the tug's crew heard people calling from the water on Puget Sound and picked up two men.

They were suffering so severely from exposure they could not talk coherently but after 15 minutes in a hot shower one of them asked if the rest of the crew had been rescued.

The Challenger resumed the search while calling the American Coast Guard, picked up three more and then assisted a coast guard vessel in rescuing another four.

All nine were crab fishermen whose ship had gone down.

Union Rejectors To Meet LRB

The 24 staff members of the Mediaeval Inn will meet a panel of the Labor Relations Board Aug. 16 in Victoria to decide whether the workers will be covered by a union contract.

Employee spokesman Ulla Spech said the meeting will be held at the Victoria Law Courts and all the employees have been invited.

"I assume this will be the end of it and they will finally decide," she said.

The employees were certified under Local 835 of the Beverage Dispensers and Culinary Workers' Union in April 1973. Spech said that since the certification the staff has changed and no longer wants the union.

In early June, the employees sent a petition to the LRB asking that they be decertified.

Earlier this month, Spech, Inn owner John Jones and the company's lawyer met with the LRB panel and union representatives in Vancouver for a 10-hour hearing, but, Spech said, nothing was decided at that meeting.

'Don't Need Any Fairy Tales'

Harbor Action Wanted: Pollen

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Back from a month's holiday to continuing debate on Victoria's Inner Harbor, Mayor Peter Pollen today urged the provincial government to place action above reports and studies in its efforts toward waterfront rejuvenation.

"We don't need any Grimm's fairy tales or grandiose reports, we need some definite action, some positive indications of provincial co-operation with the city," Pollen declared.

The mayor's comments stemmed from his summing-up of the Rod Clack report on the Inner Harbor as "Another voice, another opinion, another summary of everything that has been said before" with regard to the subject.

Like two of his aldermen, Pollen maintains that the basic substance of the report by Clack, a former city planner who is now assistant general manager of Ottawa's National Capital Commission, reiterates principles of waterfront planning that have been advocated by the city for several years.

He also endorsed comments by Ald. Mike Young and Ald. Sam Bawlf criticizing Clack for not contacting city planners and learning the background to city policies before he prepared his report for the provincial government.

"I find it rather sad," Pollen added.

He said the essential priorities now facing the government are to place a price tag on the entire waterfront improvement project, and to complete its property purchase and relocation plans.

Specifically, Pollen said the government must:

—Relocate the Black Ball ferry terminal.

—Prepare a long-term plan for the Songhees industrial reserve which will phase out industrial use in favor of residential use.

—And make an early start on construction of below-grade parking facilities on the government-owned site that was formerly to house the Reid Centre.

On the need to examine cost figures, the mayor said: "It's all right to say we're going to do this, this and this if the government is going to put up $100 million or so — and I don't think that's any exaggeration — over the next six years."

The National Capital Commission had already swallowed up close to $1 billion of taxpayers' money, he noted, and the provincial government might well wish to pursue that "grandiose route."

But, by contrast, the city's efforts had been directed along much more modest and practical lines, "evolutionary rather than revolutionary."

Pollen said while he was anxious to avoid "controversy and vitriolic comments" in city-provincial relations concerning the Inner Harbor, he was finding it difficult to suppress a growing sense of frustration at the government's lack of action on vital matters.

He cited the fact that the city had negotiated a $1.2 million purchase price for the Marathon property before the negotiations were turned over to the government 18 months ago. Yet still, he added, no deal had been concluded.

"There is the albatross, the millstone around the neck of the whole Inner Harbor program," he said.

Drug Term Appealed —Wrong Name Given

A 20-year-old Victoria man now serving a four-month jail term is appealing his sentence because he says he is not the person he said he was at the time of his court appearance.

The man, who said he was Scott Berry, now says he is Timothy Spencer. Police confirm he is not Scott Berry — and that could affect the length of his sentence.

A person went to the prisoner's box July 16 in provincial court and pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

Prosecutor Nick Lang told Judge William Ostler that police went to 208-268 Superior at 2 a.m. July 16 after receiving a complaint of a disturbance. Police questioned a man who said he was Scott Berry, and gave him a notice to appear in court.

After saying police found four marijuana plants, a full glass of seeds and a bag of marijuana in the suite, Lang read what the Crown alleged to be Berry's record: three drug convictions between June, 1973 and March, 1974.

The person in the box did not deny the record, and was then given the four-month sentence. But he later told police he was not Scott Berry, but Timothy Spencer.

A fingerprint analysis made by city police, Lang said today, confirmed that the person is not Scott Berry.

Spencer, Lang said, is not believed to have any convictions for narcotics offences.

Legal Aid officials were informed of Spencer's claim and lawyer Bill McElmoyle has been appointed to try to have an appeal hearing set.

McElmoyle said today he plans to go to the Appeal Court in Vancouver to try to get Spencer released on bail pending an appeal.

Lang said the common sentence for first offenders would be a $75 fine or 14 days in jail.

SUN CLEARING LAWN FUNGUS

Dr. J. H. O'Reilly, provincial plant pathologist, said today the unusual damp spring and early summer months gave rise to a number of fungus diseases affecting grass, such as red thread, but particularly slime mould.

"Some people were concerned when they saw this appear on thier lawns," he said. "There is little you can do about it, except to rake it or cut the grass.

Red thread, as the name implies, is a thin reddish fungus. It also disappears in dry, warm weather.

Hussein Coming

Hussein will make no public appearances and details of when he will arrive and how many hours he will be in Victoria have not yet been forwarded from Ottawa, L. J. Wallace, deputy provincial secretary, said today.

SENT TO HOSPITAL with cuts and bruises following three-vehicle collision at Keating Crossroad and Central Saanich this morning was Mrs. Archibald McGregor, 853 Mann. Best Back Out of Back-Alley Romance

DEAR ABBY: I've been divorced for 12 years and have three children. For the last two years, I've been dating a man who is a year younger than I am. I've been 100 per cent true to him, and we even talked about marriage.

Well, out of the blue he tells me that he is getting married next month! I couldn't believe it. Now all my friends tell me that they knew he had been seeing this other girl all along.

Abby, I love him. He says he loves me, too, but he got so involved with this other girl he thinks the best solution would be to marry her and continue to see me whenever he could.

I don't want a back-alley relationship with a married man. I can't believe I've wasted two years of my life on someone who could do this to me. Please tell me what to do. — Feeling Helpless.

DEAR HELPLESS: Face it. You've been used. Tell that poor-excuse-for-a-man that you never want to see him again. You're lucky you didn't marry him. Who needs a husband who tries to line up an affair on the side even before he's married?

DEAR ABBY: Tell me something. Do I have a right to complain? We've been married for 14 years, and for the last ten years my husband has taken a 10-day skiing vacation without me.

I couldn't go because I had no one to leave the kids with. I took one vacation without my husband five years ago. I went to Florida for a week to visit my folks, and I took my kids with me. Some vacation!

My husband says: "Just because YOU have to stay home doesn't mean I have to."

Rah, rah, for women's lib! —Angry.

DEAR ANGRY: You made your first mistake when you stayed home with the kids while hubby took to the slopes. They're his kids too, aren't they? The squeaking wheel gets the grease, so give him three choices: (1) The whole family takes a vacation together—kids included. (2) You and hubby vacation together and farm the kids out. (3) You and hubby vacation together, and hire somebody to stay with the kids.

DEAR ABBY: Please help correct the erroneous idea that most homes for unwed mothers have closed down because they are no longer needed.

The fact that more unmarried mothers are keeping their babies doesn't necessarily mean that no one needs our services anymore. Many unmarried pregant girls need a quiet place where they can "think", and get counselling and guidance (not preaching) from people who understand. Delivery of her baby is a small part of her need.

Moving Upsets the Menu

As I mentioned in an earlier column, we have decided to move locally. Ideally, like the Arabs, I would like simply to fold the tent and slip silently into the night. Arabs, however, do not have a tent full of Christmas tree ornaments, snow boots, and fifteen volumes of the "Bobbsey Twins" saga.

As we approach the final stages, we find ourselves occupying two tents, both of which are semi-habitable, but neither truly liveable. This morning my son discovered that his left tennis shoe, not to mention all his underwear, is at the new house. The spatula, likewise, has been moved. Yesterday morning I spent the better part of 10 minutes trying to turn a fried egg with two salad forks.

I began packing boxes a month ago in a very organized manner; a typical label proclaimed "GREEN ANTIQUE PORCELAIN TEA SET FROM BOTTOM SHELF OF DINING ROOM CHINA CABINET." Today is the day before we move. While I am still packing boxes, I don't label them any more. How do you label a box containing a mousetrap, three ballpoint pens, a plumber's helper, a bottle of catsup, and a pink plastic back-scratcher?

Last Friday we ate an unusual casserole based on the contents of six refrigerator jars full of leftover Spam, scalloped potatoes, fruit cocktail, red cabbage, maraschino cherries, and pitted ripe olives. Having thus neatly disposed of the refrigerator contents, I cleaned the oven yesterday. Since then I have refused to cook anything that might splatter, drip, or boil over. We are subsisting on a steady diet of tuna fish sandwiches and cold chicken noodle soup.

On the brighter side, I am findng things that I had long ago despaired of ever seeing again. Things like a red knee sock, a blue bedroom slipper, and a left-handed mitten. But I must admit that I would have been a wee bit more delighted to have found them before last March, when I threw away their mates.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

In the medical journal, "Patient Care," I found an excellent article on medical treatment with hypnosis (called bypnotherapy). The doctors writing the article have had much experience with hypnosis, and they say that many people with certain smoking or stuttering can be kinds of pain, migraine headaches, certain skin diseases, severe facial neuralgia or menstrual pain, the pain of birth, or a desire to stop greatly helped with hypnosis.

Some physicians feel that hypnosis is not worth inducing because the improvement is transient, while enthusiasts say that sometimes the good effect is long-lasting.

Some experts say that only a percentage of patients can be hypnotized, and only some doctors can hypnotize patients. The doctors recommend special training for physicians who want to study hypnosis not so much to learn sicians who want to study hypnosis not so much to learn how to hypnotize, but how to use hypnosis therapy effectively.

Interestingly, experts say that a doctor should not try to use hypnosis for a problem he is not competent to treat without the hypnosis. For example, only an expert allergist should use hypnosis in treating asthma.

In the article, I read that people cannot concentrate well as poor subjects. Lack of the patient's trust of the doctor usually interferes with good hypnosis. The best subjects usually are people of moderate to high intelligence, who are fairly well educated, well-adjusted, and accustomed to mental discipline.

A good test to a hypnotizable person is whether he can roll his eyes upward while closing his eyelids. The higher the person can "look up," the more hypnotizable he is. Also, the person needs to have faith in the technique for it to work well.

With hypnosis, as with acupuncture, some people can be relieved of "intractable" (not easily stopped) pain. I read that a surgeon removed a lung with only hypnotism as the anesthetic.

Afterwards, the patient had no memory of the experience, except of the surgeon drawing a line across his chest with a pencil. The use of the hypnosis was especially helpful in this case, because the patient could not tolerate chemical anesthesia.

In another case, a woman had not been able to get relief from migraine headaches so severe that she suffered for about 21 days out of each month with intense pain and nausea.

During her first visit to the hypnotherapist, she easily went into a hypnotic trance, and the doctor suggested to her that her headaches need not recur. She left the office convinced that she no longer would have headaches.

A month later, two days before her second appointment, she called to cancel because she had not had another headache in that time. Weeks later, she was still free of the migraines.

Hypnotism was helpful in the case of an elderly woman who had a cancer of the stomach, and refused to allow her doctor to perform a gastroscopy, in which a tube is passed down the gullet so the doctor can look into the stomach.

The first time the procedure had been done, it was so painful that the woman swore she would rather die than "have the thing put down her throat again."

Her doctor was able to hypnotize her so that later she recalled only that it seemed to take about a painless two minutes, although it actually had taken 15 minutes.

The writers of the article on hypnosis say that it is not true that hypnosis is unethical because the patient loses control over his thoughts and actions. A person in a hypnotic trance will not carry out instructions contrary to his own sense of morality.

I have always been greatly impressed with the experience of a Scotch surgeon named Esdaile, who, many years ago in India, successfully operated on 250 Hindus, using only hypnotism as an anesthetic.

Later, when he tried this technique in Scotland, it failed so badly that his fellow Scots angrily drove him out of the country. The problem was that, unlike the impressionable Hindus, the Scotch were hard-headed, skeptical and dubious about Esdaile's technique.

This reinforces what the experts say: the patient must have confidence in the skill of the doctor in order to be hypnotized successfully. The minute he loses confidence, he will come out of the trance.

CANADA KEEPS OUT SUPER SWEETENER

OTTAWA (CP) — Deficiencies in data on a new artificial sweetener rated 180 times sweeter than sugar have so far stalled attempts by a United States firm to market the product in Canada.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) announced approval — except for cooking and bottled soft drinks — of the sweetener last week.

Canadian officials spotted gaps in details provided with a submission by the company to sell the product, called aspartame, in Canada.

"We got the submission about a year ago, and we have simply told the company — G.D. Searle and Co. — that we need more information," said Dr. A. B. Morrison, director of the federal health protection branch.

"The information that the company submitted was not for the product as it would be sold," he said. "We believe it would have been changed for sale. It's complete information on the marketable product that we must have."

To date, this information had not been furnished.

The product, which would help fill the gap left by the banning of cyclamate in 1969 because it was an alleged cause of cancer in test animals given massive doses, now can be used in the U.S. in a wide range of materials including gelatins, puddings, breakfast cereals and dessert toppings.

Since the cyclamate ban in Canada, only saccharine has been used instead of sugar. An FDA spokesman said last week that the heat of cooking foods tends to break down aspartame with a consequent loss of sweetness, but there apparently is no safety problem and more studies are being conducted toward approving the product for cooked products.

Toughness Helps In Operation Of Family Co-Op

By ALAN ARBUCKLE

EDMONTON (CP) — The Boyle Street Co-op operates out of a one-time hotel in a slum, offering a kind of family support to the drunks, the unemployed, the old and the other groups in society who find they can't handle the world around them.

The co-op's director, Alice Hanson, looks as if she should really be building a career or playing golf instead of working in the midst of the rougher side of life.

"It's the first time in my life I have ever had a job that I quite often think about in my spare time at home because there's always something you are trying to work through," said the 47-year-old mother of two grown children.

The co-op offers plenty of challenge to work through.

It offers help in the areas of legal aid, housing, medical attention, employment, recreation, alcohohlic rehabilitation, community outreach to put people in touch with the services they need and companionship to the old and lonely who make up a large segment of the area's population.

But more than a collection of social services under one roof supported by the federal government, the co-op offers support to those who want to change their life-style but can't do it except through long-term readjustment.

"The co-op provides those things a family does for most people. You get out on the street and you don't have a family to support you through the transition. "We have to be willing to go through that transition with a person, to support him when he falls back, to have expectations but not to put him down too much."

The co-op has a full-time staff of seven, some of them area people, plus specialists from agencies operating under its roof who not only offer help in their own fields but try to look at the whole problem and refer their clients to other specialists.

Mrs. Hanson said the people of the area have their own goals, not the middle-class ones of material achievement but goals of self-esteem and ability to cope with day-to-day living.

"They're very kind, helping people. They want friends. Friends are terribly important. They are generally very kind to each other. They'll give each other their last dollar.

"Mind you, there are some of them who roll each other too."

They can't cope with a normal business environment and need activities that will make them feel like participants in society, she said.

The psychology graduate, who has been doing volunteer work for years, couldn't articulate her own motives clearly.

"You have to be really sure of who you are and what you stand for before you can work in an area like this. You can't get too sympathetic."

'Nut Fringe' Tag Spurned by MLA

WINNIPEG (CP) — Rosemary Brown, a member of the British Columbia Legislature, had sharp words for her own political party at the opening of a national conference of New Democratic women.

Brown said there is a feeling among male members of the NDP that women's liberation is confined to a small "nut fringe" of the party.

"For feminists within a socialist party to have such a conference on women's rights is either a result of failure on behalf of the party or on behalf of its feminist members," she said.

Brown, who is the MLA for Vancouver-Burrard, urged conference participants to withhold support from any candidate who doesn't support the principle of women's liberation.

"True equality of women is the cornerstone of socialism. Women must get out and work for the candidate who'll support women's rights."

Turning to the subject of women in government, she complained that government departments which deal primarily with women have few women employees.

"Sixty per cent of the welfare recipients in B.C. are women, but males dominate the decision-making processes in that department. The result is a sexist welfare system."

Brown said the party should adopt an affirmative action program for women's rights at its next convention and support the creation of a ministry of women's rights.

"It is inhumane and sadistic to make women go through this struggle unnecessarily. The party must endorse these measures so that some of the burden and pain will be alleviated and the struggle shortened."

"Out of this conference will come the blueprint showing how all of us can do more. It will mark the beginning of the end of an era."

The national conference decided to press the federal government for a homemakers bill of rights to provide training assistance to women who re-enter the labor force after raising a family.

The conference felt the bill should be modelled after the veterans bill of rights which gives assistance to men who have served in the armed forces.

A telegram also was sent to Prime Minister Trudeau from the 200 delegates, expressing distress for the recent conviction of Dr. Henry Morgentaler for performing an illegal abortion. The telegram demands his immediate release.

Following a closed session on strategy and decision-making, the conference issued a list of recommendations. Some of those recommendations were:

— That the conference establish a committee to seek out a woman candidate to contest the next NDP leadership convention;

— That all women not employed outside of the home be covered by the Canada Pension Plan;

— That there be more federal research into birth control methods and a public family planning education program.

Job Invasion One-Sided

VANCOUVER (CP) — Women are moving into jobs that formerly were classified as all-male territory but how many men are doing the reverse?

A check of Vancouver's six major banks showed a total of 1,700 tellers. None were men, with the exception of male trainees who work at the position temporarily.

"Men aren't satisfied to remain as tellers," said one personnel representative. "Banks look for career people who will move on to management rather than people who will limit themselves to the lower salary of a teller."

The British Columbia Telephone Co. employs 2,760 operators and only one is a man. He will not talk publicly about his work but he is doing it by choice.

Men no longer are scorned by other men and regarded as less than masculine by women if they enter vocations traditionally staffed by females.

Brian Young, for example, is one of 200 male nurses in the 13,000-strong British Columbia nursing profession. His casual no-uniform attire sometimes leads to misunderstandings.

"Occasionally I'll be doing some nurse's job and a patient will ask me when orderlies began carrying out that function," said Young. "I've been mistaken for a doctor, too."

Gary Trujillo is working as a key-punch operator with three women in his office. The supervisor is a man. Trujillo, who has a degree in computer sciences, is waiting for the right job.

He said the office job is "giving me an opportunity to see how an office runs and teaching me a little about accounting procedures."

Ian Macdonald isn't complaining either. He was the only male graduate of the school of home ecnomics at the University of B.C. this year.

"We need more fellows around here," said MacDonald. "Things are changing. Boys are taking home economics in school now not just for a year — but for up to three years."

He specialized in nutrition and now is experimenting with the toxic effects of vitamin E on rats. If he gets married "I'd let my wife have complete control over the cooking."

At Vic and Fran Phillips' North Vancouver home, there's no argument over who does the cooking. Fran works as a registered nurse and Vic cooks, bakes bread, mills flour, weaves and cleans. He also writes and builds furniture for the house he and Fran built more than 23 years ago.

"Other men have their established preconceptions about work but I've never held a traditional job," he said. "You might say I've done a lot of creative goofing around."

He adopted the house-husband role by choice in 1964 when his wife returned to school and to work.

DRIVING A BUS 'KIND OF SCARY'

"I thought I knew the city but there are so many parts I never knew existed," Terry Teslenko said. "This is fun but it's kind of scary.

"Nobody noticed that I missed the turn and had to go around the block."

Mrs. Teslenko, 21, became a Calgary Transit System CTS driver in May and has encountered her share of double-takes.

"One guy pulled up next to me, noticed I was a woman and his car started wavering back and forth," she said.

"I think the funniest incident occurred in my training period when I pulled up to a bus stop to pick up a male passenger and he just walked away, muttering something under his breath after he saw me."

Mrs. Teslenko almost didn't get the CTS job. When she first applied for the position she was told that her height — five feet four inches — and her sex might be handicaps.

But the interviewer was new at the job and unaware that previous height restrictions of five-feet-seven had been lifted. And transit officials said there had been a misunderstanding about women applicants.

"We take women if they qualify," said Bob Wray, transit manager. "A good woman driver is as good as a man but we haven't exactly been flooded with applicants."

Mrs. Teslenko was driving a 38-seat school bus when she applied for a job with CTS. Transit officials put her behind the wheel on a trial basis early in April and were satisfied she could reach and control the pedals properly.

'Relaxation Response' Better Than Coffee?

By BERNARD CAUGHEY

BOSTON (UPI) — Scrap that coffee break. Instead take a "relaxation response" break — and maybe you'll live longer and happier.

That's the advice of Dr. Herbert Benson, director of the hypertension section of Beth Israel Hospital, who has come up with a simple technique you can go through in your office or home to help prolong your life and reduce the risks of high blood pressure, heart disease and stroke.

Here's all you need:

— A quiet environment with as few distractions as possible. For example, an office desk in a quiet room.

— A mental device such as a single-syllable sound or word repeated in a low, gentle tone. He suggests the word "one."

— A passive attitude to help you rest and relax. If distracting thoughts enter your mind, simply disregard them.

— A comfortable position, probably a chair where you can get in as restful a position as possible to reduce muscular effort. You can support your arms and head. Remove your shoes and loosen all tight-fitting clothing.

Benson, in the current edition of Harvard Business Review, says you should then follow this procedure.

Close your eyes.

"Deeply relax all your muscles, beginning at your feet and progressing up to your face — feet, calves, thighs, lower torso, chest, shoulders, neck, head. Allow them to remain deeply relaxed.

"Breathe through your nose. Become aware of your breathing. As you breathe out, say the word 'one' silently to yourself. Thus: breathe in . . . breathe out, with 'one.' In . . . out, with 'one' . . .

"Continue this practice for 20 minutes. You may open your eyes to check the time, but do not use an alarm. When you finish, sit quietly for several minutes, at first with your eyes closed and later with your eyes open."

An associate professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School, Benson said the technique should be practiced twice daily, but not within two hours after a meal, since the digestive process seems to interfere with the expected changes.

He noted that heart attacks and strokes have been increasingly affecting young people and many cardiologists feel we are in the midst of an epidemic of these diseases.

After using the "relaxation response," Benson said, "the great majority of people report feelings of relaxation and freedom from anxiety . . . akin to those often noted after physical exercise, but without the attendant physical fatigue."

Though additional study is required, he said preliminary research shows regular use of the relaxation response may lower blood pressure, may lead to use of fewer drugs or decreased dosages and could decrease or eliminate heavy use of alcohol and cigarettes.

Benson warned no person should treat himself for high blood pressure and if suffering from the disease should use the technique only under doctor's supervision.

Benson called on the business sector to take the lead.

"For example, programs could be established in which time is made available for employees to practice the relaxation response . . . a quiet environment is desirable, but a person can elicit the response at his or her desk or at any comfortable seat.

"A relaxation response break' might be substituted for the coffee break. They may improve employees' ability to deal with stress and increase their sense of well-being."

Plant Genus Variations Make Fascinating Study

The dissimilarities within one genus of plants becomes a fascinating study for observant amateurs and often adds new and somewhat locally uncommon ones to the scene.

Since shrubs are important in today's garden design to minimize constant attention in the purely ornamental section, let us talk about the genus Buddleia.

Commonly called Butterfly-bush because butterflies extract nectar from the late summer species, they could as well be called Bee-shrubs for in spring the bees find one species an early source of their favorite food.

First to bloom, late April into May, is Buddleia globosa with honeycombed gold balls freely borne at the end of every branch of the previous summer's growth. The flowers have a fragrance slightly citric, no wonder the bees are appreciative.

This shrub needs only the slightest protection to the northeast against winter wind, for it is almost an evergreen. With us, it does lose its deeply veined, dark green leaves finally in early December, but makes rapid progress from an early spring start.

Very little pruning is needed, because new shoots quickly grow from the two buds, one each side of every flower spike, after the flowers fade and fall.

Buddleia globosa is bulky and needs space to show off its magnificent crop of golden balls. It will grow to 10 or 12 feet fairly quickly yet is readily controlled by cutting back hard in April some of the old branches. New growth from lower down will develop.

Next to bloom is B. alternifolia by about mid June. This one is a direct contrast to B. globosa, for its growth habit is slender and arching, almost willow-like, and the tiny purpose blossoms appear all along the willowy stems. Leaves are narrow, greyish green.

Pruning must be carefully done immediately flowering is almost over. Cut just beyond the bottom flowers to encourage more whippy growths to form during summer.

B. alternifolia does need a background of twiggy and evergreen shrubs for protection in winter, for its weak branches blow around and may be broken by gales.

Late July in some years will see the last of the three hardier buddleias coming into bloom. This is the species known as Butterfly-bush, Buddleia davidii, and its many varieties in deep purple, purplish red, mauve, deep mauve, pure white and a pinkish one.

These are well adapted to our unpredictable winters, for so long as a few inches of the lowest trunk is not frost-damaged new growth will break when spring comes.

With incredible speed the long branches reach seven feet or so, ready to form long cone shaped heads of tiny flowers as the daylight length shortens in the latter part of summer. These also have a perfume, this time of fresh honey.

Pruning is done in April here, just as new shoots are visible on the low down old wood. Cut off the long canes of last year, right down to just above lively new shoots.

Give any of these buddleias a sunny place and they will return you a brief but lovely show of their flowers, each season with its own grace and beauty.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

A lady walking down the street was approached by two unkempt little boys ages about four and seven. The older urchin said: "For a nickel, my little brudder will imitate a chicken." Smiling, and handing him a nickel, she said: "Well, isn't that fun! What does he do, cackle?"

The reply came: "Lady, when you do business with us you don't get cheap substitutes. He eats a worm."

Which brings us to the subject of going "chicken" at the bridge table. And, like the ragamuffin's little brother, when an expert occasionally goes chicken, he goes first class all the way. The deal arose in a rubber-bridge game. East-West vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 ♠	Dbl.	5 ♠	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♡.

South's pre-emptive three-spade opening bid was a trick short of standards, but it turned out well. West's double was normal, and North made an excellent call when he came up with a pre-emptive raise to five spades. His bid was based on the appreciation that South had a long spade suit within a poor hand; and North wanted to deprive East-West of the bidding space which they would need to interchange information.

When the bidding reached East, he was at a loss as to what to do. He realized that the possibility was strong that East-West could make a slam. But he didn't know which suit to bid, hearts or diamonds.

So, beset by uncertainty, he turned chicken-hearted to make sure of obtaining a profit. He doubled the five-spade call. As he admitted later, he knew that he was taking the safe path of least resistance, but if he bid a slam instead, he might lose everything. In his opinion, his chicken-heartedness was justified on the basis that "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush."

At the doubled five-spade contract South went down two tricks, for an actual loss of only 200 points, since he collected 100 in honors. East-West could have made a grand slam in either hearts, diamonds or clubs, scoring 2410 in hearts, and 2340 in clubs or diamonds.

No Honey Tree For Dead Smokey

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House agriculture committee votes today on a resolution dealing with Smokey the bear's eventual burial. But congressional aides promised there will be no reference in the codument to "the great honey tree in the sky."

An agriculture subcommittee had approved an earlier version of the resolution by Rep. Harold Runnels, (D—N.M.), which would return the elderly bear to his birthplace at Capitan, N.M., "for proper disposition and a permanent memorial."

In Runnels' first version partly out of concern for the feelings of young children, the lawmaker's aides drafted the resolution without mentioning the word "death." Instead, the legislation spoke of plans for when "Smokey Bear goes to that great honey tree in the sky."

Later, however, at the request of the agriculture committee, Runnels redrafted the resolution into briefer, more direct language which says: "It is the sense of the congress that upon his death, the body of Smokey Bear may be returned to Capitan . . ."

A spokesman for Runnels said the change came because "some individuals" on the agriculture committee wanted "less flowery language." Other sources indicated some committee members feared the childlike language would make them look silly. But Runnels' aide said the congressmen didn't object to the change.

"As long as we get the resolution, we're quite happy," he said.

Smokey, a 24-year-old brown bear, was found after a forest fire near his New Mexico birthplace when he was a cub and was adopted as the living symbol of the U.S. Forest Service's fire prevention campaigns.

Smokey and his "bride" Goldie now live in the national zoo in Washington with little Smokey. Another cub who eventually will replace the elder bear when he dies and is returned to New Mexico.

CHICKEN LITTER PUTS BITE IN LAW

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Indiana State Police have been thus far unsuccessful in their search for a $900 set of false teeth accidentally tossed out the window of an auto by a litterbug.

Police say a motorist reported that he was driving along eating chicken and tossing the bones out the car window when he tossed his dentures — still imbedded in a chicken bone — out the window.

Police found the man who was confined to a wheel chair — rolling up and down the median of the roadway Sunday searching for the missing dentures.

Trooper Allen K. Smith told his superiors he did not ticket the man for littering, or even get his identity, since he felt the fellow had enough problems as it was.

Promoters Cool To Proposed Home-Run Duel

TOKYO (AP) The proposed home run hitting contest between Atlanta Braves' slugger Hank Aaron and his Japanese counterpart Sadahara Oh has hit a snag.

The Yomiuri Giants — Oh's team — responding to reports that the competition would take place in Japan after the World Series, said there have been no offers so far from promoters.

"Presently, the Giants' owners have no idea how the contest will be held and on what conditions," said Yosho Ono, the Giants' public relations director.

Ono also said Oh, who has hit 610 home runs in his 15-year baseball career, would nake no further comment other than one made earlier that he would gladly accept Aaron's challenge.

Piggott Joins List

ASCOT, England (AP) — Lester Piggot, 38, a nine-time British riding champion, became the third jockey to ride 3,000 winners on British racetracks by scoring in the Princess Margaret Stakes aboard Roussalka. The other two 3,000-race winners were Sir Gordon Richards and Doug Smith.

Nichols Climbs Money Ladder

WASHINGTON (AP) Bobby Nichols, who captured the $40,000 top prize Sunday in the Canadian Open, jumped from 20th place to 10th on the Professional Golfers' Association 1974 money-winning list with $111,660.

Johnny Miller, who did not play in the Canadian Open, still leads the money list with $204,750.

Reluctant Peacekeeper Canada's Role

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Whether it likes it or not, the Canadian government is becoming more involved in the role of peacekeeping.

And it doesn't like it.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has reluctantly gone along with the request from UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to double our contribution to the peacekeeping force on Cyprus.

The cabinet dragged its feet at first. Defence Minister James Richardson was ready and willing. The forces naturally are anxious to take on such meaningful jobs. It beats filling sandbags and building dikes to fight floods.

But this government has been graduatlly trying to reduce its peacekeeping roles. In keeping with the modern attitude the government doesn't want to get involved.

When "Foreign Policy for Canadians" the new revised foreign policy papers for the Trudeau government was issued in 1970 it placed the sovereignty of Canada at the top of the list of the defence department's responsibilities. Peacekeeping was relegated to a much less important position than it had held under the government of L. B. Pearson.

Under the Trudeau administration defence has been a matter or relatively minor importance, it would appear from the way the department has been treated, James Richardson, when he was given the job of defence minister late in 1972, was the fifth minister of national defence in the last half-dozen years. No wonder that morale in the department had begun to deteriorate and some of its best trained men were deciding to get out and look elsewhere for jobs.

Since the Trudeau government took office it has downgraded defence. Defence policy has been on an ad hoc basis. Defence spending was frozen and the freeze was only thawed less than two years ago.

Now a shooting war between the Greeks and the Turks on Cyprus is taxing that policy. The UN secretary-general called on participating nations, including Canada, to double the UN peacekeeping forces shortly after shooting broke out.

The Canadian government balked, but two days later agreed, again reluctantly, to double its force. But it added the face-saver that its increased contribution was to be considered a "temporary measure." It would be reviewed when the current mandate of the force is reviewed prior to its expiry on Dec. 15.

This is leaving Canada "thin on the ground" at home for carrying out the activities as set out in the 1970 foreign policy papers. Those activities are identified in order or priority as: First, protection of Canada. Second, North American defence. Third, contribution to NATO collective defence measures. Fourth, contribution to international stability. It is under this fourth category that peace-keeping falls.

Sharp has explained that it was becoming involved in the Middle East peacekeeping role that has stretched Canada's forces.

He said in a recent interview, however, that the situation was not critical because if the forces were ever needed urgently back home they could be recalled.

But it is obvious the old Pearson policy of peacekeeping being a prime role for Canada is on the way out.

UN forces on guard at Nicosia airport

FORCES EYE RECRUIT BOOST

By STEPHEN SCOTT

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Forces hope the situation in Cyprus will have at least one positive result: provide a spur to flagging recruitment of infantrymen.

Like most volunteer services in the world, the forces are suffering from a continuing shortage of soldiers, and officials look to the highly complimentary publicity received by the Canadian Airborne Regiment to "show youngsters there is still glamour in being a soldier."

A forces spokesman said Monday "fantastic" stories on Canadians are coming from Cyprus and indicate to the adventurous that being a soldier is still an exciting business. "You can be sitting in the sun in Alberta one day and the next be in Cyprus."

Col. Herve Legace, chief forces recruiter, said Cyprus is already helping a little.

The publicity when Canada joined the UN forces in the Middle East helped recruitment last fall, he said.

"It was after Christmas that things got bad."

Canadian infantry forces total 7,000 men, 500 under strength. Recruiters say they need 1,000 men to make up for the present shortfall and to keep up with attrition.

The problem is not unique to the Canadian forces, which number about 82,000 at present, about 8,250 of them overseas. To overcome a similar problem, the United States army is offering those who will join the infantry an immediate $3,000 cash bonus.

Col. Legace said the forces are considering their own incentive system, although it will be nothing so lavish.

He said under one proposal infantrymen would receive faster-than-usual pay raises and in three years have the opportunity to transfer to some other "trade."

Grant for Factory

LONDON (AFP) — The British government announced a grant Friday of nearly £5 million ($12 million) to enable a workers' cooperative to run the Norton-Villiers-Triumph motorcycle factory aa Meriden, near Coventry, Warwickshire. The workers occupied the factory 10 months ago when the company decided to transfer all production to Birmingham and Wolverhampton. The cooperative had until the end of July to buy the premises.

Posh but War-Worn Hotel Canadians' Cyprus Home

NICOSIA (CP) — Some of the Canadian soldiers serving with the United Nations peacekeeping forces on embattled Cyprus are to enjoy just a taste of old-time elegance now that the men from Canada have taken over the war-damaged Ledra Palace Hotel in Nicosia.

With reinforcements from Canada arriving today, the Canadians are filling up rooms left habitable after the fierce fighting between Greek and Turkish-Cypriots, which kept some 400 civilian guests trapped there for almost two days after the invasion of Cyprus by Turkey.

Parts of the hotel were left shambles of broken glass, flooded floors and debris that included baggage left by the guests. But despite severe damage to at least one storey, the building — by battle standards — survived relatively unscathed.

It was the Canadians, operating from their UN barracks across the street from the Ledra Palace, who finally arranged a local ceasefire between the Greek and Turkish-Cypriots July 21, and thus saved the hotel guests from death in a possible all-out attack on their haven by the Turks. The Greek-Cypriots had been using it as a battle position.

Since then, Canadian troops have been carefully sorting the left luggage and making the bullet-pocked building fit for habitation again.

The Canadians who'll live there, won't enjoy any of the staff services or most other luxuries associated with a resort hotel, although a chandeliered lobby and a posh garden embellish their surroundings.

But living at the Ledra will be a decided improvement on barracks life, especially since some buildings at the Canadian compound were hit during last week's fighting.

A number of the Canadians, most of them from the Edmonton-based Airborne Regiment, owe thier lives to the degree of discipline shown by the Turkish-Cypriots during the fighting.

Recalling the mortal risks to the peacekeepers which would have been posed if the Turks had been trigger-happy, one Canadian said that if the latter hadn't been so disciplined many Canadians would have died.

Not all the Canadian troops are at the barracks. Some have gone to a British air base on the south coast of Cyprus to make arrangements for the arrival of the reinforcements from Canada.

Among them was Cpl. Larry Baillie, a native of Salt Spring, N.S.

Last week he was caught for two hours in a Greek-Turkish crossfire while manning a UN outpost with seven other Canadians.

"We were a little nervous," said the Nova Scotian as he coolly described tracer bullets whizzing across the outpost only a few feet off the ground.

Kenora, Ojibways Remain At Odds

KENORA, Ont. (CP) — Militant Indians and the Kenora town council both hardened their positions over the occupation of Anacinabe Park Monday, and the situation is expected to come to a head within the next day or so.

Louis Cameron, leader of the Ojibway Warrior Society, said there will be "aggressive actions" if the park is not turned over to them by Wednesday noon.

Cameron would not say what he meant by aggressive action. However, there was speculation that the Indians' first move could be to cut off a road running near the park — a move officials in this northwestern Ontario community could hardly allow to pass unchallenged.

Meanwhile, Mayor Jim Davidson and the town council called on the militant Indians to leave or remove their weapons to a place where they could be controlled.

"We are absolutely and firmly convinced that every day of unlawful occupation of Anicinabe Park makes successful negotiations of the issues raised by the Ojibway Warrior Society more and more difficult," the mayor said.

"The council of the town of Kenora is prepared to act in good faith and immediately appoint persons to join with federal and provincial mediators and responsbile representatives of local Indian bands to achieve settlement of these issues.

"This would follow evacuation of the park or when all arms are removed to a mutually satisfactory place of control and the establishment of regular inspection of the park by the authorities."

The Indians, who have held the park for nine days and barred access to all persons except reporters, rejected the town's requests.

The Indians, including some members of the American Indian Movement, were meeting this morning to discuss their next course of action.

Negotiations with local, provincial and federal officials were expected to have resumed Monday, but no definite plans for new talks have been announced.

Episcopalian Leaders Balk As 11 Women Become Priests

Times News Services

PHILADELPHIA — In a break with more than 1,900 years of tradition, 11 women were ordained as Episcopal priests Monday by four bishops defying the national governing body of their church.

Although the church does not officially admit women to its priesthood, the controversial ceremony apparently was valid.

But the head of the Episcopal (Anglican) Church said today the women priests will not be allowed to work as priests because the bishops who conducted the ceremony exceeded their authority.

The Rt. Rev. John M. Allin, presiding bishop of the 3.1-million-member church, said in a statement the ordination of the 11 women "was contrary to the constitution and canons of the Episcopal Church.

"Accordingly the ordinations are irregular and may be found invalid. Under the canons, diocesan bishops are bound to restrict any deacons receiving such ordination from exercising priestly functions."

Bishop Allin said the ceremony "acutely adds grievous and burdensome problems" for the church.

The congregation of more than 1,500 in Philadelphia's Church of the Advocate erupted into applause and cheers as the bishops laid their hands on the first of the women candidates for ordination, the Rev. Jeannette Piccard, 79-year-old widow of balloonist Jean Piccard.

Mrs. Piccard says she has felt called to the priesthood for 68 years.

More than 50 priests joined with the bishops in the laying-on-of-hands ceremony, symbolically welcoming the women into the priestly fraternity.

Professor Charles V. Willie, of Cambridge, Mass., the layman vice-president of the church's national house of deputies, who preached at the service, said women could no longer be expected "to corroborate in their own oppression by remaining on the periphery of full participation in the church."

The announcement that the women would be ordained, made 10 days ago, stirred protests from most of the top officials and many of the active bishops of the Episcopal Church including most of those in whose dioceses the women ordained serve.

The Rev. George Rutler, of Rosemont, Pa., perhaps the most outspoken, insisted to the bishops that by presuming to ordain women they were attempting an impossibility. God "sees you trying to make stones into bread," he said to the bishops.

"That is not sacramental grace, sirs, that is magic." He went on to tell the women that they could never effectively celebrate the Holy Eucharist. "You can offer up only the smell and the sigh and the sound of perversion," he said.

About half the women are employed in Episcopal Church jobs, and it appeared that some of them might be punished by their bishops if they now exercise the priesthood conferred on them. Bishop Robert Hall of Virginia has already ordered the Rev. Alison Cheek of Annandale, Va., not to minister pending a review of her ordination by the Episcopal House of Bishops in October. Mrs. Cheek said she could not accede to the request.

The Rt. Rev. Ned Cole, Bishop of Central New York, announced he had suspended Mrs. Betty Bone Schiess of Syracuse, N.Y., one of the 11 women ordained.

ESCAPE TRY COOLED

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A red-hot escape bid by a B.C. Penitentiary inmate early Monday was cooled when the driver of a refrigerated meat truck noticed he was carrying more than sides of beef.

Penitentiary director Dragon Cernetic said Ralph Cochrane, 48, hopped into the back of a meat truck while the driver was delivering meat to the prison kitchen.

When the driver opened the truck's back door at his next delivery in nearby Coquitlam he noticed two feet.

Slamming the door shut immediately, he called Coquitlam RCMP and Cochrane was arrested and returned to the prison.

Cochrane was attending the prison school program and was in the fourth year of a life sentence for armed robbery.

WASHINGTON — Charging that he had wilfuly impeded its inquiry, the house judiciary committee voted today to recommend President Nixon be impeached and removed from office for disobeying its subpeonas for Watergate tapes.

The third article of impeachment was approved by a roll call vote of 21 to 17 in which 19 Democrats were joined by two Republicans.

Approval came after Article I was adopted Saturday night by 27-11, charging Nixon with obstructing justice in the Watergate cover-up; and the Monday night vote.

By a vote of 28 to 10 — with one more Republican joining the majority — the committee accused Nixon of repeatedly violating his oath, his duty and the rights of ordinary citizens in areas other than Watergate.

Today's vote accused Nixon of showing contempt for Congress by refusing to give up 147 tapes subpoenaed by the committee. Opponents say no president should be obliged to furnish evidence to be used against him.

McClory's vote brought to seven the number of Republicans who have voted for impeachment, with 10 consistently opposed. All 21 Democrats united a second time.

Also likely to come to a vote today was a proposed article on Nixon's $432,000 underpayment of taxes and use of government money to improve his homes.

Its sponsor, Rep. Edward Mezvinski (D — Iowa), said he believed he had 17 Democratic votes and might get the four Republican votes necessary for a winning majority of 21.

Deputy White House press secretary Gerald Warren gave the same response to Monday's committee vote as GENEVA — A new three-power accord was concluded today, giving Turkey a right to retain military forces on Cyprus, delegates reported.

The agreement, outlined by Turkish, British and Greek delegates, called upon Turkey to cut but not totally withdraw its invasion force from Cyprus sometime in the future.

No date was specified, however.

The delegates said the accord also gave Turkey's estimated 20,000-strong contingent the right to intervene if Turkish-Cypriots feel threatened by their more numerous Greek-Cypriot fellow-islanders; the right to continue occupying all new territory seized since the UN truce eight days ago and called for recognition of two self-ruling communities on the island, giving Cyprus the look of a federal state.

A spokesman for the Turkish delegation predicted the accord would be signed this afternoon.

As soon as an interim military agreement is concluded in Geneva, the Cyprus peace talks will be able to advance to a second stage to deal with the island republic's political future. This would include an overhauling of the Cyprus constitution as well as the 1960 agreement whereby Greece, Turkey and Britian guaranteed Cyprus independence.

These talks might begin toward the end of the first week in August, the Turkish spokesman said. One date being mentioned is Aug. 8.

Observers in Geneva reacted to the latest pronouncements with caution, recalling that several times during the six days of talks delegates had said an agreement was near. But each time the accord fell through.

The talks again appeared headed toward failure when Turkey, which had been taking a hard line, offered new proposals at the three-power conference.

U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger intervened today in the talks at the request of British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan in an effort to break a deadlock holding up final agreement between Greece and Turkey, conference officials said.

On Cyprus, Turkish invasion forces kept UN convoys off the roads today and a regiment of Turkish troops, backed by armor and artillery, marched eastward to strike positions from which they could seize control of the Greek Cypriot-held road to Nicosia, UN sources said.

British Maj. Peter Gill, commander of UN forces in Kyrenia, siad the Turkish administration had halted UN patrols and ordered his forces to quit the area.

Turkish tanks, jeeps equipped with recoil-less rifles and artillery units moved up in support. There was no Greek Cypriot resistance to the Turkish advance and there were no sounds of gunfire.

Meanwhile, ousted Cyprus president Makarios flew from New York to London today, and aides said he has booked hotel rooms for two days to await the outcome of the Geneva talks. They said he expects to confer with Callaghan after the foreign secretary returns from the conference.

ROCKETS FIRED IN BEIRUT

BEIRUT — Palestinian guerrillas using mortars and rockets battled Lebanese rightwingers in a Beirut suburb today in the worst fighting in the capital since the Lebanese army clashed with the guerrillas in May 1973.

In Jerusalem, Defence Minister Shimon Peres, in remarks prepared for delivery in the knesset (parliament), said the Soviet Union is supplying Arab "terrorist organizations" with weapons.

The trouble in Lebanon stemmed from a shooting incident Saturday in which a palestinian guerrilla from the Tel-Ez-Zaatar camp shot and wounded Ibrahim Gideon, leader of the right-wing phalangist militia in the Beirut suburb of Dikwaneh. Other militia members shot and killed the palestinian.

Barge Dumps $3.6M in Pipe

AMCHITKA ISLAND, Alaska (AP) — The 8,300 tons of steel pipe destined for the trans-Alaska pipeline project in tow by a B.C. tug and lost in stormy seas Sunday is estimated to have been worth $3.65 million.

A spokesman for BP Alaska Oil Co., the field operators for the consortium of companies developing Prudhoe Bay, also said it is uncertain what the company will do to replace the pipe.

The pipe was dumped from a barge 22 miles east of Amchitka Island Sunday in stormy seas. The barge was en route from Japan to the north slope when it was lost. The 34- and 38-inch pipe was to be used to connect gathering stations at Prudhoe Bay with the pipeline.

The tug Sudbury II, which was towing the barge, jettisoned the pipe in an effort to save the barge, officials said. No injuries were reported

Chileans On Trial

SANTIAGO, Chile (WP) — The largest single trial of civilians by a military court since the overthrow of President Salvador Allende last year began Monday in the provincial Chilean city of Linares, according to reports reaching legal circles here.

All 74 defendants are civilians being tried for political offences and all were reported to be members of Allende's Socialist party, outlawed since the military coup in which the Marxist president died. The military prosecutor has asked that four of them be sentenced to death for trafficking with the enemy — defined as the Allende government.

City Urged to Study Rental House Program

Victoria housing committee members today urged city council to take advantage of federal and provincial funding to set up a low-income rental housing program under a non-profit housing corporation or some similar organization.

Committee chairman Ald. Percy Frampton said Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson had indicated that 100 per cent funding would be available to the city for such a project, for both capital and operating costs.

He said Nicolson's suggestion had followed a letter he (Frampton) had written, voicing concern over the effect of the provincial government's office expansion plans on the city's housing supply.

Frampton told the minister the department of public works not only snaps up all available office space in the city, even before new construction has started, but also converts existing residential buildings, thereby displacing tenants.

Nicolson's reply expressed interest in the alderman's suggestion that the housing department acquire various properties in the city for conversion to low-income rental suites.

Such accommodation, Nicolson said, would be especially useful for senior citizens, and he invited specific proposals for purchases.

His letter added: "Alternatively, the city of Victoria may wish to establish a non-profit housing corporation to engage in such an enterprise. One hundred per cent funding would be available from the federal and provincial governments."

Housing committee members today were solidly in favor of following up Nicolson's suggestion.

Said Ald. Alf Hood: "I think we must pursue some of these programs. The housing situation is not easing; it's becoming more acute if anything."

In forwarding the matter for discussion by council's committee of the whole, the committee asked planning director Geoff Greenhalgh to report on the management structure that would be required to operate a major housing program, and the initial funding required before senior government money becomes fully available.

Interior IWA Ratifies Pact

KELOWNA (CP) — Work could resume today at some forest operations throughout British Columbia's southern interior after members of the International Woodworkers of America overwhelmingly ratified a contract offer.

Wyman Trineer, chief negotiator for the 8,000 IWA southern interior members, said Monday night that pickets would be lifted and "the strike is over." He said some mills could resume operations today.

Trineer said he would not release figures or percentages on the vote, but said membership acceptance was "by a good healthy majority."

Voting in the southern interior locals — Kelowna, Kamloops and Cranbrook — was held during the weekend. Workers went on strike Wednesday.

The one-year pact, retroactive to June 30, was worked out Thursday by negotiators for the union and the Interior Forest Labor Relations Association.

Agreement resulted from resolving two contentious issues — sawmill job category wage revisions and non-union contractors working for forest companies.

Major contract items included a 12-per-cent across-the-board, minimum 65-cents-an-hour increase, cost-of-living allowance with first payment Jan. 15, 1975, and a dental plan.

Also included is a new vacation schedule allowing from two weeks paid holiday for union members with one to three years seniority to six weeks for those with more than 27 years seniority.

A new overtime clause gives workers double time for all hours worked more than 12 in a day and for Sunday.

CUT KILLS BERRY PICKER

NANAIMO — A 71-year-old woman bled to death after she cut her leg Saturday while picking blackberries behind her home in Cedar, near Nanaimo.

Nanaimo RCMP said Grace Amy Lavigne was found in a pool of blood at the back porch of her home. They believe she collapsed while trying to reach a phone to call help.

Coroner C. F. Newcombe has ordered an inquiry.

Fire Guard Contains Hope Blaze

HOPE (CP) — Firefighters were working today to finish bulldozing a fire guard around a 500-acre blaze in a thickly-wooded area of the Coquihalla Valley, about 20 miles northeast of here.

Barring high winds, the completed earth strip should contain the forest fire which has raged out of control since Saturday said Bill Smith, district fire protection officer.

"Things are looking in pretty good shape and if we don't get any really bad winds we should be able to tie it up today," said Smith.

Fanned by high winds and 100-degree temperatures, the blaze started to spread Saturday after having burnt for four days as a one-acre spot fire.

Gold Resumes Upward Climb

Deposits Earn 10.5% in Banks

Victoria banks have pushed their top deposit rate to a record 10.5 per cent interest in an effort to attract funds in a tight money market.

The rate for short term deposits of between one and three months is up from 10.25 per cent.

Under the Winnipeg Agreement all banks offer identical deposit rates for terms of up to one year but some banks insist on minimum deposits of $5,000 while others are as low as $1,000 for the 10.5 per cent rate.

Banks insisting on a $5,000 minimum deposit point to the large amount of paper work and the small amount of profit in funds available for a maximum of 89 days.

Among those offering 10.5 per cent with only a $1,000 deposit is the Bank of Montreal.

Oak Bay branch manager L. G. Baird said about 70 per cent of his customers were old age pensioners and other living on fixed incomes.

"They are very conscious of interest rates and shop around for the best deal."

The bank has placed a sign in its window advertising the new rate.

Baird said the rise in rates has created a great interest in deposit income in the Oak Bay area.

"The volume of deposits is up 50 per cent after being about level for many years."

Many of the pensioners are converting funds from long term deposits where interest rates are lower to the high short-term deposits, Baird said.

"This creates a lot of paper work for us but we have to attract funds while the tight money situation lasts."

Roger Hemeon, manager of the main branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, said his company insists on a $5,000 minimum deposit to get the 10.5 per cent rate.

He said the Bank of Canada gave banks the option to vary the minimum deposit amount

ALDRIN NOT USED ON B.C. CROPS

The B.C. agriculture department doesn't permit use of the pesticides aldrin and dieldrin on food crops or for the control of forest pests, government entomologist Jack Arrand said today.

But, he said on rare occasions, commercial growers have been permitted to use the chemical pesticides to control the narcissus fly — a pest of narcissus bulbs.

Arrand was commenting on a report from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency that there is overwhelming evidence the pesticides cause cancer, especially in young children.

The report stated that only political considerations are preventing EPA from exercising its authority to call for an immediate halt.

Arrand said while aldrin and dieldrin has never been banned in B.C., a government permit must be obtained before it can be used.

"We have never permitted the use of the pesticides on food crops and only rarely to control the narcissus bulb pest," he said.

Arrand said growers have exerted pressure on the government to relax the controls.

"Some think we are being too strict," he said. "They complain while they are not allowed to use the chemicals, growers in Washington can use it to control a strawberry pest. This apparently puts them at a disadvantage.

"But the department has always held that the use of the chemicals should be strictly controlled," he added.

Mexico Tortures Canadian—Paper

CALGARY (CP) — The son of a Calgary couple is being held by Mexican authorities on a drug charge and has been tortured and brutalized while the parents attempt to raise $30,000 to free their son, according to a story in The Albertan.

The newspaper says the couple, not identified because they said they feared reprisals against their son, is near-bankruptcy due to alleged extortion by Mexican officials.

Maurice Schwartzmann, Canadian Ambassador to Mexico, is quoted as saying Canada is doing all it can to obtain the son's freedom but cannot interfere with the internal affairs of another country.

The morning daily quotes the ambassador as saying a hunger strike by American and Canadian prisoners at the jail where the Calgary boy is kept ended last week, and no one became ill as a result of the strike.

The paper says the son claimed guards at the jail beat and tortured prisoners and said a group of prisoners were selling "protection."

The paper said the boy claimed the torture involved electric cattle prods "used on the most sensitive parts of the body," forced wakefulness, 16 to 18 hours of labor such as scrubbing cell walls, and constant beatings.

The father is quoted as saying he met with a Mexican lawyer, and a representative of the Mexican attorney-general's department Jan. 4 and that at the meeting he was told his son would be released from prison if the father paid a fee for this "consideration."

"The original starting price was $100,000 but there was no way he could supply that type of money so $30,000 was decided upon," the paper says.

The embassy has relayed the couple's complaints concerning prison conditions to Mexican authorities and embassy officials have visited Canadians in the prison every day, but the ambassador said Canada can do nothing for them.

Yanks Add Another To Futility Streak

By The Associated Press

Another game was added to New York Yankees' futility streak in Boston's Fenway Park Monday night when the Red Sox clipped them 2-1 in 11 innings. That makes 11 straight losses in Boston for the Yankees—and 20 in their last 21 games there.

If the Yankees are starting to believe in hexes, they got some more evidence Monday night. The Red Sox managed only three hits and won the game in the 11th without the aid of a hit.

Elsewhere in the American League Monday, Baltimore Orioles trimmed Milwaukee Brewers 6-2, Detroit Tigers clubbed Cleveland Indians 8-2, Texas Rangers trounced Kansas City Royals 10-1, and Oakland A's outscored Chicago White Sox 11-9.

The last time the Yankees managed a victory in Boston was last July 31.

Evans' homer matched Bill Sudakis' solo blast in the fourth inning, and the score stayed 1-1 until the 11th.

Carl Yastrzemski led off the 11th against New York reliever Sparky Lyle and drew a walk. Bob Montgomery laid down a sacrifice bunt but Lyle threw wildly to first. Then Rick Burleson walked on four pitches, filling the bases.

Four Detroit batters sent first-inning homers into the stands, causing any late arrivals to miss a major league record.

Never before had a team hit four homers in the first inning, although four teams have hit five home runs in a single inning and the four-homer mark has been reached 17 times.

Al Kaline, Bill Freehan and Mickey Stanley belted consecutive homers of Fritz Peterson, and two batters later, Ed Brinkman connected off Steve Kline.

Len Randle and Mike Hargrove delivered two-run singles and Jeff Burroughs hit his 17th homer of the year for Texas to help Ferguson Jenkins pick up his 14th win in a game delayed one hour and 36 minutes by rain.

Look Out, Maury, Lou's Closing In

By The Associated Press

Lou Brock continued his explosive base-stealing pace Monday while helping St. Louis Cardinals beat Chicago Cubs 11-2 in a National League baseball game.

"Winning games is important, not setting records," Brock said after stealing his 65th base of the season and 700th of his career.

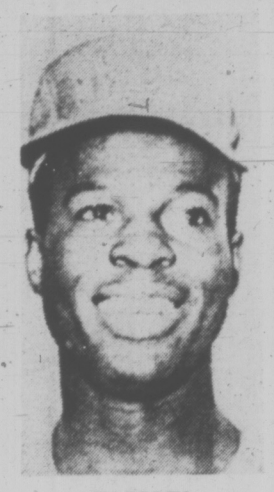
"But when the competition is tight and the challenge is there, then you find yourself doing things you didn't think were possible."

Brock, closing in on Maury Wills' single-season record of 104, also moved up on the all-time list into some exclusive company.

Only four other players in baseball history have stolen 700 or more bases—Ty Cobb (892); Eddie Collins (743); Max Carey (738) and Honus Wagner (701).

"Yes, I remember once saying that 700 stolen bases was my goal," Brock said, acknowledging a reporter's question. "I'm surprised it came this quickly, especially considering the start I had last year.

"I was out on 10 of my first 23 attempts. That was when 700 looked tough. Then I stole 60 of my next 70. That turned it around."



LOU BROCK
. . . winning important

In Monday's other National League games, New York Mets nipped Montreal Expos 4-3, Los Angeles Dodgers hammered Atlanta Braves 10-2; Philadelphia Phillies routed Pittsburgh Pirates 13-1; San Diego Padres stopped Cincinnati Reds 3-2 and Houston Astros trimmed San Francisco Giants 7-2.

Along with his steal, Brock singled twice and scored twice while Ken Reitz and Joe Torre both homered for St. Louis.

Brock singled in the first inning and stole second. At this point the game was stopped for a brief ceremony during which the umpires uprooted the bag and presented it to Brock. Then Brock scored on a single by Ted Simmons, putting St. Louis ahead to stay.

John Milner belted a two-run homer in the eighth inning, powering New York over Montreal for the Mets' fourth consecutive victory.

Jim Wynn knocked in four runs, including two on his 24th home run of the baseball season, helping Los Angeles snap a three-game losing streak with an easy triumph over Atlanta.

bill walker

What people tend to forget is that Don Moorhead "played hurt" most of last season, Jim Young told the first touchdown luncheon of the season at the Red Lion Monday. And this year, he is just fine.

Jim Young is otherwise known across Canada as "dirty-thirty" of the B.C. Lions, and is having a book published under that title this fall. So maybe people should listen.

Monday, Jim put himself on the spot in a question period after lunch, didn't lose any yards, saw new hope for the Lions this year, predicted the CFL will survive, and defended quarterback Moorhead to the hilt.

"Don is No. 1," he said "and in two or three years he will be the best of all the others in the CFL. What most people won't realize is that last year he was hurt most of the time."

First, Moorhead was out of action with a shoulder injury, then he had a bad ankle which troubled him right until the end of the season. In all he missed four or five games. And as it was the Lions finished third.

Young also defended the B.C. Lions' policy of building for the future, as opposed to attempting to buy a Grey Cup.

"It's a fallacy to think that you can buy a football team," he charged. "It doesn't work that way. A football team must be developed. 'Fire the coach' used to be the drill in the past. I think we had four coaches the first five years I was on the Lions. Now, this year's team has had a chance to develop, and I think most of the players appreciate the way the coaches have handled the situation. Everyone knows where they stand."

'Attitude' Key to New Look

"There has been a different approach this year. And if this is what might make a winner, Young explained too that one reason he thought the Lions didn't pick up pass-catching great Terry Evanshen of the Montreal Alouettes, was that Evanshen "couldn't beat out either of our wide receivers, Slade Willis or Brock Aynsley."

Sure, it was the right thing to say, but just the same it probably wouldn't have worked out that way if the Lions thought they were in trouble. And hopefully the only real trouble they do face is in the future when all-star running back Johnny Musso returns to action in September.

"We just could have a problem," said PR director Grant Kerr . . . too many backs". But that's a happy problem and one that will be hurdled if and when. Musso at present is out of action having had an operation on his leg. He should return in September, and it could cause a manpower issue.

Meanwhile, Young revealed a few other thoughts, such as:

"Astroturf can't touch natural grass; you grow up on grass; on grass you can get a feel you can't get on the new turf. Still, nothing ruins a football game like a mud bath . . . which you don't get now." He also pointed out the community value of the mod sod, the first year in Empire Stadium the number of events increased from 14 to 92. So you have to like it.

CFL Calibre Unappreciated

As to the World Football League, "it can't hurt football in Canada. It can only help. Besides, our game is better.

"People don't realize that the calibre of football in Canada has improved tremendously in the past few years, and right now it isn't that much different than the NFL.

"The game has really developed. You don't see it unless you're involved in it."

On defence, "our defence is as good as any in the league. The addition of (Bill) Baker, has the whole team psyched up. He makes the others do things."

On Saskatchewan, "hopefully the Riders won't be as good. Edmonton gave it to them (in their opener) and maybe they won't have the spirit they usually have any more."

On the possibility of jumping to the WFL, "I was drafted by Toronto, now Memphis; I talked to John Bassett and could have been the oldest rookie anywhere, but I'm staying here."

On salaries, "CFL salaries aren't high, and football salaries aren't high on what is produced in comparison to hockey, twice as high, basketball, three times . . ."

Later he pondered:

"Hey, that's a great idea . . . having a sponsor who makes bread. (This was in reference to McDonalds Bread, a local radio broadcast sponsor of Lions' games).

"That's what football players should have more of . . . bread."

"Dirty thirty" had scored at lunch. Hopefully the Lions can do as well on the field.

'We've Lost Strike,' Admits Bears' Tackle

By The Associated Press

The National Football League players' strike entered a critical stage today with the resumption of talks and rank-and-file criticism of the players association's negotiating tactics.

Efforts to settle the 30-day-old strike were scheduled to resume this afternoon in Washington under the supervision of the federal mediation and conciliation service's chief, W. J. Usery.

Usery met Monday with representatives of the NFL Players Association and planned to talk with the NFL Management Council, bargaining agent for the owners, today before resuming negotiations.

Usery said he hoped now that "we can get both sides down to hard, good-faith bargaining. That is what we desire and are working for and we hope an agreement can be consummated."

Meanwhile in Chicago, offensive tackle Bob Asher of the Bears said "it's getting obvious we've lost the strike. The owners aren't budging."

They were quarterback Joe Gilliam, safety Dennis Myer, defensive end Craig Hanneman, defensive tackle Steve Furness, and wide receivers Barry Pearson, Glenn Skolnick and Dave Davis.

Another notable defection was that of quarterback Greg Landry, who joined Detroit's Bloomfield Hills, Mich., camp but won't play for the Lions in exhibition games until the strike is settled.

Other players who abandoned the strike Monday included lineman Kent Branstetter of Green Bay, lineman Larry Smiley and defensive back Jackie Wallace of Minnesota Vikings, linebackers Jim Youngblood, Rick Kay and Jim Peterson, and tackle Tim Stokes of Los Angeles Rams, running back Billy Lefear and defensive end Lester Sims of Cleveland Browns, wide receiver Preston Riley of Atlanta Falcons, defensive back Eldridge Small of New York Giants, Ira Gordon of San Diego Chargers, safety Jeff Severson of Houston Oilers, offensive tackle Gerry Palmer of Baltimore Colts, and Hank Bjorklund and Mike Adamle of New York Jets.

Sports on TV: How Much Is Too Much?

By NEIL AMDUR

NEW YORK (NYT) — Professional football games will be available six days a week on United States television in August, but Leonard Kessler has had it as an armchair quarterback.

"I feel saturated," said Kessler, an author and illustrator from New City, N.Y., echoing the sentiments of many overwhelmed sports slaves. "Last year, when they finally got to the Super Bowl, I was super bored. This whole proliferation of sports has accelerated to such a crazy pace that I enjoy watching a Doris Day movie now."

Kessler apparently is not alone. Nielsen television ratings indicate a decline in the total number of viewers for the average sports telecast in the last two years, from 13,000,000 in 1972 to 12,740,000. Viewer interest also has dropped significantly, according to the Nielsen numbers, in such prestige sports as professional football, college football, pro basketball and hockey.

Despite the reverse trend, television still ranks as the most important source in reshaping the economic structure and social values on the expanding sports scene. It has stablized whole leagues, created events and personalities and emerged as an intensely competitive medium that often sells itself as much as its feature attractions.

The three commercial networks in the United States now carry 1,000 hours of everything each year from baseball to barrel-jumping, and sport accounts for about 11 per cent of total network time, almost double the total of a decade ago. That may be a heavy dose for the average viewer in one year, the networks concede. But how much is too much, they argue?

"I've felt there's been too much sports on television," acknowledged Ronald E. Bain, the director of sports at the Columbia Broadcasting System. "The question is when is the viewer going to find that? From what we've been able to determine, it does not appear that we've reached the saturation point yet."

Many men regard the start of the new 12-team World Football League, with its pitch toward weeknight summer audiences, as no worse than the multitude of morning game shows, afternoon soap operas and evening reruns.

"Sometimes I think there's not enough sports on television," said Hilary Lipsitz, a Manhattan film and record producer. "The other stuff on television is so dreadful that I seldom watch anything but movies or sports. Nobody sticks a gun at your head and makes you watch a sports event."

Television's role involves more than watching someone throw bottles at Pete Rose. The entertainment success of pro football on Monday night prompted a number of civic and religious organizations, town councils and bowling leagues to shift traditional meeting dates. They were afraid of losing out to television.

Family sports have profited from television's audience potential. The ratings for the professional bowlers' tour have increased from 7.2 to 9.1 in the last five years.

Tennis, once a game for the classes, is enjoying record appeal and increased ratings for the masses, although network officials believe the game is being overexposed on television.

Television's strongest impact in sports, besides being able to reach millions of fans in a single event, may be in showcasing individuals who often fulfil roles thrust upon them by a public hungry for heroes and villains.

In June, Evel Knievel, the daredevil motorcyclist, whose bizarre feats have been carried on television, showed up at Manuche's restaurant here. He caused more buzzing among the patrons than a heavyweight boxing champion.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Paul Terbenche, veteran National Hockey League defenceman, signed a five-year contract Monday with Vancouver Blazers of the World Hockey Association.

Terbenche, 28, was picked by Kansas City Scouts from Buffalo Sabres in the recent NHL expansion draft. He had been acquired by the Sabres in the 1970 expansion draft from Chicago Black Hawks.

'Give Us Another 26 Acres'

Stalking the wild turnip in sunny Saanich has been such a success the agriculture department expects to offer more allotment gardens next year.

"Give us another 26 acres and we'll fill them," said a department official as Agriculture Minister David Stupich and reporters viewed the first 3½-acre plot given over to do-it-yourself vegetable growers 12 weeks ago.

A wild range of table vegetables covers the 142 plots at Patricia Bay Highway and Kent Road, mostly planted by city apartment dwellers trying to relieve the confines of high-rise life, or pensioners and young couples attempting to beat the cost of living.

A few have trimmed their 25 by 50-foot gardens with neat rows of flowers and patches of lawn, and most have tended their gardens carefully to enjoy what the agriculture department considers exceptionally good yields.

Stupich said he is looking for more unused land near urban population centres in Greater Victoria and the Van-Vancouver-Lower Mainland areas to try to meet the demand for home-grown garden vegetables.

There are two other allotment gardens under departmental supervision — 10 acres in Richmond that provide 250 plots, and 18 plots on private land near Wilkinson Road, also in Saanich.

The Pat Bay Highway gardens straddle Swan Creek on land owned by the highways department and they are relatively close to public transportation, are supervised and include irrigation for the $10 seasonal fee.

Gardening counsellor Jack Beastall, who with wife Hilda was an early advocate of allotment gardening, said he had offered advice to many novices in weekly visits to the acreage.

"The majority — whether they take home any vegetables or not — are getting the relaxation, the enjoyment of socializing with other people. It's a wonderful thing for apartment dwellers," Beastall said.

Helen Savoie, 853 Burdette, agreed with that. To her; visiting the plot and tending her crop is "the most exciting thing since my wedding day."

Another said it was fun to watch things grow.

Victor Jumago, 1007 Esquimalt, who hadn't gardened for about 10 years, was overjoyed at the quick rate of growth. He pulled a potato up by the roots to see if they were forming properly:

"I couldn't believe it — potatoes as big as my fist already."

Jumago expects to harvest 300-400 pounds of potatoes along with a full range of other vegetables his wife will be busy canning.

"I've already put down eight quarts of beets," she said.

Their total outlay has been only $40.

Firms Violating Consumer Laws, Province Warns

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria Chamber of Commerce has urged local merchants to re-examine their sales contracts following a warning from the department of consumer services that new provincial laws are being violated by many British Columbia firms.

Chamber manager Brian Small said the violations probably are quite innocent and simply a matter of not being aware of the new regulations of the Trade Practices Act.

Act director Michael Hanson, in a letter to the chamber, said merchants should immediately strike out any offending clauses as an interim measure while documents were being revised.

In general terms, the new provincial regulations make it an offence to imply that an article is at a bargain price if it is not, and that a large number of products are available at sale prices if in fact the supply is limited.

Regulations regarding warranties and seizure of goods have also changed.

Hanson said he had detected several clauses in B.C. contracts that violated the new regulations.

He gave an example of a violation of the new seizure law:

"... and the dealer may take possession of the motor vehicle with or without process of law and concurrently bring suit against the purchaser for the unpaid balance."

Hanson said the law has been amended to say the dealer may repossess or sue but may not do both.

An example of a warranty violation:

Sais Hanson: "Our Sale of Goods Act was amended some time ago to ensure that its implied warranties could not be disclaimed when new goods are sold."

He said the two examples were taken from among many contract violations and he urged companies to re-examine their contracts.

"We will be moving quickly to enforce the provisions of (the Trade Practices Act) which has now passed into law," Hanson said.

American Honors For Seaspan Crew

An admiral in the U.S. Coast Guard is coming to Victoria next Tuesday to pay tribute to the six-man crew of a Seaspan tug which helped save nine lives in Puget Sound last month.

A Seaspan spokesman said today Rear Adm. Chester Richmond, commander of the 13th coast guard district in Seattle, will arrive by helicopter for luncheon arranged by Seaspan.

He will deliver individual "commendations" to the crew of the Seaspan Challenger — Capt. John Webb, mate Barry Fairall, deckhands Fred Wagner and Jerry Farley, cook Frank O'Halleron and engineer John Shaw.

About 3:30 a.m. June 18 the tug's crew heard people calling from the water on Puget Sound and picked up two men.

They were suffering so severely from exposure they could not talk coherently but after 15 minutes in a hot shower one of them asked if the rest of the crew had been rescued.

The Challenger resumed the search while calling the American Coast Guard, picked up three more and then assisted a coast guard vessel in rescuing another four.

All nine were crab fishermen whose ship had gone down.

Union Rejectors To Meet LRB

The 24 staff members of the Mediaeval Inn will meet a panel of the Labor Relations Board Aug. 16 in Victoria to decide whether the workers will be covered by a union contract.

Employee spokesman Ulla Spech said the meeting will be held at the Victoria Law Courts and all the employees have been invited.

"I assume this will be the end of it and they will finally decide," she said.

The employees were certified under Local 835 of the Beverage Dispensers and Culinary Workers' Union in April 1973. Spech said that since the certification the staff has changed and no longer wants the union.

In early June, the employees sent a petition to the LRB asking that they be decertified.

Earlier this month, Spech, Inn owner John Jones and the company's lawyer met with the LRB panel and union representatives in Vancouver for a 10-hour hearing, but, Spech said, nothing was decided at that meeting.

'Don't Need Any Fairy Tales'

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Back from a month's holiday to continuing debate on Victoria's Inner Harbor, Mayor Peter Pollen today urged the provincial government to place action above reports and studies in its efforts toward waterfront rejuvenation.

"We don't need any Grimm's fairy tales or grandiose reports, we need some definite action, some positive indications of provincial co-operation with the city," Pollen declared.

The mayor's comments stemmed from his summing-up of the Rod Clack report on the Inner Harbor as "Another voice, another opinion, another summary of everything that has been said before" with regard to the subject.

Like two of his aldermen, Pollen maintains that the basic substance of the report by Clack, a former city planner who is now assistant general manager of Ottawa's National Capital Commission, reiterates principles of waterfront planning that have been advocated by the city for several years.

He also endorsed comments by Ald. Mike Young and Ald. Sam Bawlf criticizing Clack for not contacting city planners and learning the background to city policies before he prepared his report for the provincial government.

"I find it rather sad," Pollen added.

He said the essential priorities now facing the government are to place a price tag on the entire waterfront improvement project, and to complete its property purchase and relocation plans.

Specifically, Pollen said the government must:

—Relocate the Black Ball ferry terminal.

—Prepare a long-term plan for the Songhees industrial reserve which will phase out industrial use in favor of residential use.

—And make an early start on construction of below-grade parking facilities on the government-owned site that was formerly to house the Reid Centre.

On the need to examine cost figures, the mayor said: "It's all right to say we're going to do this, this and this if the government is going to put up $100 million or so — and I don't think that's any exaggeration — over the next six years."

The National Capital Commission had already swallowed up close to $1 billion of taxpayers' money, he noted, and the provincial government might well wish to pursue that "grandiose route."

But, by contrast, the city's efforts had been directed along much more modest and practical lines, "evolutionary rather than revolutionary."

Pollen said while he was anxious to avoid "controversy and vitriolic comments" in city-provincial relations concerning the Inner Harbor, he was finding it difficult to suppress a growing sense of frustration at the government's lack of action on vital matters.

He cited the fact that the city had negotiated a $1.2 million purchase price for the Marathon property before the negotiations were turned over to the government 18 months ago. Yet still, he added, no deal had been concluded.

"There is the albatross, the millstone around the neck of the whole Inner Harbor program," he said.

Drug Term Appealed —Wrong Name Given

A 20-year-old Victoria man now serving a four-month jail term is appealing his sentence because he says he is not the person he said he was at the time of his court appearance.

The man, who said he was Scott Berry, now says he is Timothy Spencer. Police confirm he is not Scott Berry — and that could affect the length of his sentence.

A person went to the prisoner's box July 16 in provincial court and pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

Prosecutor Nick Lang told Judge William Ostler that police went to 208-268 Superior at 2 a.m. July 16 after receiving a complaint of a disturbance. Police questioned a man who said he was Scott Berry, and gave him a notice to appear in court.

After saying police found four marijuana plants, a full glass of seeds and a bag of marijuana in the suite, Lang read what the Crown alleged to be Berry's record: three drug convictions between June, 1973 and March, 1974.

The person in the box did not deny the record, and was then given the four-month sentence. But he later told police he was not Scott Berry, but Timothy Spencer.

A fingerprint analysis made by city police, Lang said today, confirmed that the person is not Scott Berry.

Spencer, Lang said, is not believed to have any convictions for narcotics offences.

Legal Aid officials were informed of Spencer's claim and lawyer Bill McElmoyle has been appointed to try to have an appeal hearing set.

McElmoyle said today he plans to go to the Appeal Court in Vancouver to try to get Spencer released on bail pending an appeal.

Lang said the common sentence for first offenders would be a $75 fine or 14 days in jail.

SUN CLEARING LAWN FUNGUS

Dr. J. H. O'Reilly, provincial plant pathologist, said today the unusual damp spring and early summer months gave rise to a number of fungus diseases affecting grass, such as red thread, but particularly slime mould.

"Some people were concerned when they saw this appear on thier lawns," he said. "There is little you can do about it, except to rake it or cut the grass.

Red thread, as the name implies, is a thin reddish fungus. It also disappears in dry, warm weather.

Hussein Coming

Hussein will make no public appearances and details of when he will arrive and how many hours he will be in Victoria have not yet been forwarded from Ottawa, L. J. Wallace, deputy provincial secretary, said today.

SENT TO HOSPITAL with cuts and bruises following three-vehicle collision at Keating Crossroad and Central Saanich this morning was Mrs. Archibald McGregor, 853 Mann. Police estimate $3,000 damage to car and van, driven by James Alexander Thow, 19, of 2990 Beach. Third vehicle, not shown, an Eaton's truck driven by Robert Fisher, was undamaged. Best Back Out of Back-Alley Romance

DEAR ABBY: I've been divorced for 12 years and have three children. For the last two years, I've been dating a man who is a year younger than I am. I've been 100 per cent true to him, and we even talked about marriage.

Well, out of the blue he tells me that he is getting married next month! I couldn't believe it. Now all my friends tell me that they knew he had been seeing this other girl all along.

Abby, I love him. He says he loves me, too, but he got so involved with this other girl he thinks the best solution would be to marry her and continue to see me whenever he could.

I don't want a back-alley relationship with a married man. I can't believe I've wasted two years of my life on someone who could do this to me. Please tell me what to do. — Feeling Helpless.

DEAR HELPLESS: Face it. You've been used. Tell that poor-excuse-for-a-man that you never want to see him again. You're lucky you didn't marry him. Who needs a husband who tries to line up an affair on the side even before he's married?

DEAR ABBY: Tell me something. Do I have a right to complain? We've been married for 14 years, and for the last ten years my husband has taken a 10-day skiing vacation without me.

I couldn't go because I had no one to leave the kids with. I took one vacation without my husband five years ago. I went to Florida for a week to visit my folks, and I took my kids with me. Some vacation!

My husband says: "Just because YOU have to stay home doesn't mean I have to."

Rah, rah, for women's lib! —Angry.

DEAR ANGRY: You made your first mistake when you stayed home with the kids while hubby took to the slopes. They're his kids too, aren't they? The squeaking wheel gets the grease, so give him three choices: (1) The whole family takes a vacation together—kids included. (2) You and hubby vacation together and farm the kids out. (3) You and hubby vacation together, and hire somebody to stay with the kids.

DEAR ABBY: Please help correct the erroneous idea that most homes for unwed mothers have closed down because they are no longer needed.

The fact that more unmarried mothers are keeping their babies doesn't necessarily mean that no one needs our services anymore. Many unmarried pregant girls need a quiet place where they can "think", and get counselling and guidance (not preaching) from people who understand. Delivery of her baby is a small part of her need.

Moving Upsets the Menu

As I mentioned in an earlier column, we have decided to move locally. Ideally, like the Arabs, I would like simply to fold the tent and slip silently into the night. Arabs, however, do not have a tent full of Christmas tree ornaments, snow boots, and fifteen volumes of the "Bobbsey Twins" saga.

As we approach the final stages, we find ourselves occupying two tents, both of which are semi-habitable, but neither truly liveable. This morning my son discovered that his left tennis shoe, not to mention all his underwear, is at the new house. The spatula, likewise, has been moved. Yesterday morning I spent the better part of 10 minutes trying to turn a fried egg with two salad forks.

I began packing boxes a month ago in a very organized manner; a typical label proclaimed "GREEN ANTIQUE PORCELAIN TEA SET FROM BOTTOM SHELF OF DINING ROOM CHINA CABINET." Today is the day before we move. While I am still packing boxes, I don't label them any more. How do you label a box containing a mousetrap, three ballpoint pens, a plumber's helper, a bottle of catsup, and a pink plastic back-scratcher?

Last Friday we ate an unusual casserole based on the contents of six refrigerator jars full of leftover Spam, scalloped potatoes, fruit cocktail, red cabbage, maraschino cherries, and pitted ripe olives. Having thus neatly disposed of the refrigerator contents, I cleaned the oven yesterday. Since then I have refused to cook anything that might splatter, drip, or boil over. We are subsisting on a steady diet of tuna fish sandwiches and cold chicken noodle soup.

On the brighter side, I am findng things that I had long ago despaired of ever seeing again. Things like a red knee sock, a blue bedroom slipper, and a left-handed mitten. But I must admit that I would have been a wee bit more delighted to have found them before last March, when I threw away their mates.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

In the medical journal, "Patient Care," I found an excellent article on medical treatment with hypnosis (called hypnotherapy). The doctors writing the article have had much experience with hypnosis, and they say that many people with certain smoking or stuttering can be kinds of pain, migraine headaches, certain skin diseases, severe facial neuralgia or menstrual pain, the pain of birth, or a desire to stop greatly helped with hypnosis.

Some physicians feel that hypnosis is not worth inducing because the improvement is transient, while enthusiasts say that sometimes the good effect is long-lasting.

Some experts say that only a percentage of patients can be hypnotized, and only some doctors can hypnotize patients. The doctors recommend special training for physicians who want to study hypnosis not so much to learn sicians who want to study hypnosis not so much to learn how to hypnotize, but how to use hypnosis therapy effectively.

Interestingly, experts say that a doctor should not try to use hypnosis for a problem he is not competent to treat without the hypnosis. For example, only an expert allergist should use hypnosis in treating asthma.

In the article, I read that people cannot concentrate well as poor subjects. Lack of the patient's trust of the doctor usually interferes with good hypnosis. The best subjects usually are people of moderate to high intelligence, who are fairly well educated, well-adjusted, and accustomed to mental discipline.

A good test to a hypnotizable person is whether he can roll his eyes upward while closing his eyelids. The higher the person can "look up," the more hypnotizable he is. Also, the person needs to have faith in the technique for it to work well.

With hypnosis, as with acupuncture, some people can be relieved of "intractable" (not easily stopped) pain. I read that a surgeon removed a lung with only hypnotism as the anesthetic.

Afterwards, the patient had no memory of the experience, except of the surgeon drawing a line across his chest with a pencil. The use of the hypnosis was especially helpful in this case, because the patient could not tolerate chemical anesthesia.

In another case, a woman had not been able to get relief from migraine headaches so severe that she suffered for about 21 days out of each month with intense pain and nausea.

During her first visit to the hypnotherapist, she easily went into a hypnotic trance, and the doctor suggested to her that her headaches need not recur. She left the office convinced that she no longer would have headaches.

A month later, two days before her second appointment, she called to cancel because she had not had another headache in that time. Weeks later, she was still free of the migraines.

Hypnotism was helpful in the case of an elderly woman who had a cancer of the stomach, and refused to allow her doctor to perform a gastroscopy, in which a tube is passed down the gullet so the doctor can look into the stomach.

The first time the procedure had been done, it was so painful that the woman swore she would rather die than "have the thing put down her throat again."

Her doctor was able to hypnotize her so that later she recalled only that it seemed to take about a painless two minutes, although it actually had taken 15 minutes.

The writers of the article on hypnosis say that it is not true that hypnosis is unethical because the patient loses control over his thoughts and actions. A person in a hypnotic trance will not carry out instructions contrary to his own sense of morality.

I have always been greatly impressed with the experience of a Scotch surgeon named Esdaile, who, many years ago in India, successfully operated on 250 Hindus, using only hypnotism as an anesthetic.

Later, when he tried this technique in Scotland, it failed so badly that his fellow Scots angrily drove him out of the country. The problem was that, unlike the impressionable Hindus, the Scotch were hard-headed, skeptical and dubious about Esdaile's technique.

This reinforces what the experts say: the patient must have confidence in the skill of the doctor in order to be hypnotized successfully. The minute he loses confidence, he will come out of the trance.

CANADA KEEPS OUT SUPER SWEETENER

OTTAWA (CP) — Deficiencies in data on a new artificial sweetener rated 180 times sweeter than sugar have so far stalled attempts by a United States firm to market the product in Canada.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) announced approval — except for cooking and bottled soft drinks — of the sweetener last week.

Canadian officials spotted gaps in details provided with a submission by the company to sell the product, called aspartame, in Canada.

"We got the submission about a year ago, and we have simply told the company — G.D. Searle and Co. — that we need more information," said Dr. A. B. Morrison, director of the federal health protection branch.

"The information that the company submitted was not for the product as it would be sold," he said. "We believe it would have been changed for sale. It's complete information on the marketable product that we must have."

To date, this information had not been furnished.

The product, which would help fill the gap left by the banning of cyclamate in 1969 because it was an alleged cause of cancer in test animals given massive doses, now can be used in the U.S. in a wide range of materials including gelatins, puddings, breakfast cereals and dessert toppings.

Since the cyclamate ban in Canada, only saccharine has been used instead of sugar. An FDA spokesman said last week that the heat of cooking foods tends to break down aspartame with a consequent loss of sweetness, but there apparently is no safety problem and more studies are being conducted toward approving the product for cooked products.

ESCAPE TRY COOLED

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A red-hot escape bid by a B.C. Penitentiary inmate early Monday was cooled when the driver of a refrigerated meat truck noticed he was carrying more than sides of beef.

Penitentiary director Dragon Cernetic said Ralph Cochrane, 48, hopped into the back of a meat truck while the driver was delivering meat to the prison kitchen.

When the driver opened the truck's back door at his next delivery in nearby Coquitlam he noticed two feet.

Slamming the door shut immediately, he called Coquitlam RCMP and Cochrane was arrested and returned to the prison.

Cochrane was attending the prison school program and was in the fourth year of a life sentence for armed robbery.

Cyprus Pact Reached, Turk Forces Remain

Times News Services

GENEVA — A new three-power accord was concluded today, giving Turkey a right to retain military forces on Cyprus, delegates reported.

The agreement, outlined by Turkish, British and Greek delegates, called upon Turkey to cut but not totally withdraw its invasion force from Cyprus sometime in the future.

No date was specified, however.

The delegates said the accord also gave Turkey's estimated 20,000-strong contingent the right to intervene if Turkish-Cypriots feel threatened by their more numerous Greek-Cypriot fellow-islanders; the right to continue occupying all new territory seized since the UN truce eight days ago and called for recognition of two self-ruling communities on the island, giving Cyprus the look of a federal state.

A spokesman for the Turkish delegation predicted the accord would be signed this afternoon.

As soon as an interim military agreement is concluded in Geneva, the Cyprus peace talks will be able to advance to a second stage to deal with the island republic's political future. This would include an overhauling of the Cyprus constitution as well as the 1960 agreement whereby Greece, Turkey and Britian guaranteed Cyprus independence.

These talks might begin toward the end of the first week in August, the Turkish spokesman said. One date being mentioned is Aug. 8.

Observers in Geneva reacted to the latest pronouncements with caution, recalling that several times during the six days of talks delegates had said an agreement was near. But each time the accord fell through.

The talks again appeared headed toward failure when Turkey, which had been taking a hard line, offered new proposals at the three-power conference.

U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger intervened today in the talks at the request of British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan in an effort to break a deadlock holding up final agreement between Greece and Turkey, conference officials said.

On Cyprus, Turkish invasion forces kept UN convoys off the roads today and a regiment of Turkish troops, backed by armor and artillery, marched eastward to strike positions from which they could seize control of the Greek Cypriot-held road to Nicosia, UN sources said.

British Maj. Peter Gill, commander of UN forces in Kyrenia, said the Turkish administration had halted UN patrols and ordered his forces to quit the area.

Turkish tanks, jeeps equipped with recoil-less rifles and artillery units moved up in support. There was no Greek Cypriot resistance to the Turkish advance and there were no sounds of gunfire.

Meanwhile, ousted Cyprus president Makarios flew from New York to London today, and aides said he has booked hotel rooms for two days to await the outcome of the Geneva talks. They said he expects to confer with Callaghan after the foreign secretary returns from the conference.

ROCKETS FIRED IN BEIRUT

BEIRUT — Palestinian guerrillas using mortars and rockets battled Lebanese rightwingers in a Beirut suburb today in the worst fighting in the capital since the Lebanese army clashed with the guerrillas in May 1973.

In Jerusalem, Defence Minister Shimon Peres, in remarks prepared for delivery in the knesset (parliament), said the Soviet Union is supplying Arab "terrorist organizations" with weapons.

The trouble in Lebanon stemmed from a shooting incident Saturday in which a Palestinian guerrilla from the Tel-Ez-Zaatar camp shot and wounded Ibrahim Gideon, leader of the right-wing phalangist militia in the Beirut suburb of Dikwaneh. Other militia members shot and killed the Palestinian.

Nixon Loses Again

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Charging that he had wilfuly impeded its inquiry, the house judiciary committee voted today to recommend President Nixon be impeached and removed from office for disobeying its subpeonas for Watergate tapes.

The third article of impeachment was approved by a roll call vote of 21 to 17 in which 19 Democrats were joined by two Republicans.

Approval came after Article I was adopted Saturday night by 27-11, charging Nixon with obstructing justice in the Watergate cover-up.

On Monday, they charged Nixon with befouling democracy through wiretaps, breakins and tax harassment.

By a vote of 28 to 10 — with one more Republican joining the majority — the committee accused Nixon of repeatedly violating his oath, his duty and the rights of ordinary citizens in areas other than Watergate.

Today's vote accused Nixon of showing contempt for Congress by refusing to give up 147 tapes subpoenaed by the committee. Opponents say no president should be obliged to furnish evidence to be used against him.

McClory's vote brought to seven the number of Republicans who have voted for impeachment, with 10 consistently opposed. All 21 Democrats united a second time.

Also likely to come to a vote today was a proposed article on Nixon's $432,000 underpayment of taxes and use of government money to improve his homes.

Its sponsor, Rep. Edward Mezvinski (D — Iowa), said he believed he had 17 Democratic votes and might get the four Republican votes necessary for a winning majority of 21.

Deputy White House press secretary Gerald Warren gave the same response to Monday's committee vote as

Barge Dumps $3.6M in Pipe

AMCHITKA ISLAND, Alaska (AP) — The 8,300 tons of steel pipe destined for the trans-Alaska pipeline project in tow by a B.C. tug and lost in stormy seas Sunday is estimated to have been worth $3.65 million.

A spokesman for BP Alaska Oil Co., the field operators for the consortium of companies developing Prudhoe Bay, also said it is uncertain what the company will do to replace the pipe.

The pipe was dumped from a barge 22 miles east of Amchitka Island Sunday in stormy seas. The barge was en route from Japan to the north slope when it was lost. The 34- and 38-inch pipe was to be used to connect gathering stations at Prudhoe Bay with the pipeline.

The tug Sudbury II, which was towing the barge, jettisoned the pipe in an effort to save the barge, officials said. No injuries were reported

Chileans On Trial

SANTIAGO, Chile (WP) — The largest single trial of civilians by a military court since the overthrow of President Salvador Allende last year began Monday in the provincial Chilean city of Linares, according to reports reaching legal circles here.

All 74 defendants are civilians being tried for political offences and all were reported to be members of Allende's Socialist party, outlawed since the military coup in which the Marxist president died. The military prosecutor has asked that four of them be sentenced to death for trafficking with the enemy — defined as the Allende government.

City Urged to Study Rental House Program

Victoria housing committee members today urged city council to take advantage of federal and provincial funding to set up a low-income rental housing program under a non-profit housing corporation or some similar organization.

Committee chairman Ald. Percy Frampton said Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson had indicated that 100 per cent funding would be available to the city for such a project, for both capital and operating costs.

He said Nicolson's suggestion had followed a letter he (Frampton) had written, voicing concern over the effect of the provincial government's office expansion plans on the city's housing supply.

Frampton told the minister the department of public works not only snaps up all available office space in the city, even before new construction has started, but also converts existing residential buildings, thereby displacing tenants.

Nicolson's reply expressed interest in the alderman's suggestion that the housing department acquire various properties in the city for conversion to low-income rental suites.

Such accommodation, Nicolson said, would be especially useful for senior citizens, and he invited specific proposals for purchases.

His letter added: "Alternatively, the City of Victoria may wish to establish a non-profit housing corporation to engage in such an enterprise. One hundred per cent funding would be available from the federal and provincial governments."

Housing committee members today were solidly in favor of following up Nicolson's suggestion.

Said Ald. Alf Hood: "I think we must pursue some of these programs. The housing situation is not easing; it's becoming more acute if anything."

In forwarding the matter for discussion by council's committee of the whole, the committee asked planning director Geoff Greenhalgh to report on the management structure that would be required to operate a major housing program, and the initial funding required before senior government money becomes fully available.

CUT KILLS BERRY PICKER

NANAIMO — A 71-year-old woman bled to death after she cut her leg Saturday while picking blackberries behind her home in Cedar, near Nanaimo.

Nanaimo RCMP said Grace Amy Lavigne was found in a pool of blood at the back porch of her home. They believe she collapsed while trying to reach a phone to call help.

Coroner C. F. Newcombe has ordered an inquiry.

Fire Guard Contains Hope Blaze

HOPE (CP) — Firefighters were working today to finish bulldozing a fire guard around a 500-acre blaze in a thickly-wooded area of the Coquihalla Valley, about 20 miles northeast of here.

Barring high winds, the completed earth strip should contain the forest fire which has raged out of control since Saturday said Bill Smith, district fire protection officer.

"Things are looking in pretty good shape and if we don't get any really bad winds we should be able to tie it up today," said Smith.

Fanned by high winds and 100-degree temperatures, the blaze started to spread Saturday after having burnt for four days as a one-acre spot fire.

Interior IWA Ratifies Pact

KELOWNA (CP) — Work could resume today at some forest operations throughout British Columbia's southern interior after members of the International Woodworkers of America overwhelmingly ratified a contract offer.

Wyman Trineer, chief negotiator for the 8,000 IWA southern interior members, said Monday night that pickets would be lifted and "the strike is over." He said some mills could resume operations today.

Trineer said he would not release figures or percentages on the vote, but said membership acceptance was "by a good healthy majority."

Voting in the southern interior locals — Kelowna, Kamloops and Cranbrook — was held during the weekend. Workers went on strike Wednesday.

The one-year pact, retroactive to June 30, was worked out Thursday by negotiators for the union and the Interior Forest Labor Relations Association.

Agreement resulted from resolving two contentious issues — sawmill job category wage revisions and non-union contractors working for forest companies.

Major contract items included a 12-per-cent across-the-board, minimum 65-cents-an-hour increase, cost-of-living allowance with first payment Jan. 15, 1975, and a dental plan.

Also included is a new vacation schedule allowing from two weeks paid holiday for union members with one to three years seniority to six weeks for those with more than 27 years seniority.

A new overtime clause gives workers double time for all hours worked more than 12 in a day and for Sunday.

Deposits Earn 10.5% in Banks

Victoria banks have pushed their top deposit rate to a record 10.5 per cent interest in an effort to attract funds in a tight money market.

The rate for short term deposits of between one and three months is up from 10.25 per cent.

Under the Winnipeg Agreement all banks offer identical deposit rates for terms of up to one year but some banks insist on minimum deposits of $5,000 while others are as low as $1,000 for the 10.5 per cent rate.

Banks insisting on a $5,000 minimum deposit point to the large amount of paper work and the small amount of profit in funds available for a maximum of 89 days.

Among those offering 10.5 per cent with only a $1,000 deposit is the Bank of Montreal.

Oak Bay branch manager L. G. Baird said about 70 per cent of his customers were old age pensioners and other living on fixed incomes.

"They are very conscious of interest rates and shop around for the best deal."

The bank has placed a sign in its window advertising the new rate.

Baird said the rise in rates has created a great interest in deposit income in the Oak Bay area.

"The volume of deposits is up 50 per cent after being about level for many years."

Many of the pensioners are converting funds from long term deposits where interest rates are lower to the high short-term deposits," Baird said.

"This creates a lot of paper work for us but we have to attract funds while the tight money situation lasts."

Roger Hemeon, manager of the main branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, said his company insists on a $5,000 minimum deposit to get the 10.5 per cent rate.

He said the Bank of Canada gave banks the option to vary the minimum deposit amount

ALDRIN NOT USED ON B.C. CROPS

The B.C. agriculture department doesn't permit use of the pesticides aldrin and dieldrin on food crops or for the control of forest pests, government entomologist Jack Arrand said today.

But, he said on rare occasions, commercial growers have been permitted to use the chemical pesticides to control the narcissus fly — a pest of narcissus bulbs.

Arrand was commenting on a report from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency that there is overwhelming evidence the pesticides cause cancer, especially in young children.

The report stated that only political considerations are preventing EPA from exercising its authority to call for an immediate halt.

Arrand said while aldrin and dieldrin have never been banned in B.C., a government permit must be obtained before they can be used.

"We have never permitted the use of the pesticides on food crops and only rarely to control the narcissus bulb pest," he said.

Arrand said growers have exerted pressure on the government to relax the controls.

"Some think we are being too strict," he said. "They complain while they are not allowed to use the chemicals, growers in Washington can use it to control a strawberry pest. This apparently puts them at a disadvantage.

"But the department has always held that the use of the chemicals should be strictly controlled," he added.

Mexico Tortures Canadian—Paper

CALGARY (CP) — The son of a Calgary couple is being held by Mexican authorities on a drug charge and has been tortured and brutalized while the parents attempt to raise $30,000 to free their son, according to a story in The Albertan.

The newspaper says the couple, not identified because they said they feared reprisals against their son, is near-bankruptcy due to alleged extortion by Mexican officials.

Maurice Schwartzmann, Canadian Ambassador to Mexico, is quoted as saying Canada is doing all it can to obtain the son's freedom but cannot interfere with the internal affairs of another country.

The morning daily quotes the ambassador as saying a hunger strike by American and Canadian prisoners at the jail where the Calgary boy is kept ended last week, and no one became ill as a result of the strike.

The paper says the son claimed guards at the jail beat and tortured prisoners and said a group of prisoners were selling "protection."

The paper said the boy claimed the torture involved electric cattle prods "used on the most sensitive parts of the body," forced wakefulness, 16 to 18 hours of labor such as scrubbing cell walls, and constant beatings.

The father is quoted as saying he met with a Mexican lawyer, and a representative of the Mexican attorney-general's department Jan. 4 and that at the meeting he was told his son would be released from prison if the father paid a fee for this "consideration."

"The original starting price was $100,000 but there was no way he could supply that type of money so $30,000 was decided upon," the paper says.

The embasssy has relayed the couple's complaints concerning prison conditions to Mexican authorities and embassy officials have visited Canadians in the prison every day, but the ambassador said Canada can do nothing for them.
